A MAY CROWN.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY ELSIE MAY.

With winning smiles have childhood's fairy fingers
Entwined this wreath for me,
And long it's fragrance in my heart will linger,
Like some sweet memory.

No thorns lie hid among the blushing blossoms,
Bound in this circlet fair;
Oh! if within our life's bud-woven chaplets
Were as few thorns of care!

Yet comes to me to-day a thought of sadness,
And springs a sorrowing fear;
For, just one year ago, with songs of gladness,
You crowned a May Queen here.

The brow your loving garland then encircled—
More fair, more pure than mine—
Caught from each flower's incense-breathing censer,
A beauty half divine.

Alas! the breezes of this early spring time
High where she lowly lies,
The crown that she this bright May morn is wearing,
Was woven in the skies.

An angel came, with asphodel and lotus
Within his spirit hand,
And crowned her, as he wooed her gently upward,
To the bright Fatherland.

I know not, 'ere another blushing May time,
But I may lie thus low;
While buds, and blooms, and darkly waving grasses,
Above my head may grow.

CONGO, THE CONJURER.

A STORY OF SHOW LIFE.

CHAPTER XXV.
A NUMBER OF TRICKS.

Though the conjurer had succeeded in alarming Charles Everton to a considerable degree, yet he felt no assurance that he would leave Arthur alone. Any open attack, he believed, would be avoided at present; but he knew the unscrupulous character of the man and the kind of agents which he could procure to carry out his designs. It behoved them to be very watchful and to leave no stone unturned to prevent any treachery on his part. The conjurer would have left the town, but that his expenses had been so great he could not well afford to lose the money. Every precaution, however, was taken, and, in illustration of the care with which the showman watched him, he was never allowed to go out alone. Thus it was that master and pupil were to be seen twice a week in the market-place, followed by an assistant with a big basket, making purchases for the caravan. Young Lea sauntered along, with his hands in his pockets, looking at the scene before him—unusual, not uncharacteristic—while his companion did the marketing. Two days after the exposure of the cheats, one of these occasions offered. The showman was engaged with a woman who had eggs, butter and cheese. At no great distance behind her was a large donkey, looking rather disconsolate and forlorn. He had nothing to eat, and was further prevented even from braying by a stone being attached to his tail. He was a perfect picture of wretchedness and misery. Close at hand was a pile of cabbages, which the unhappy animal strove in vain to reach. The owner of the vegetables, a brutal looking fellow, gave him a smart blow with a stick, which but made the animal look up with a glance as calm and uncomplaining as made the youth quite savage. Diving his hands deeper into his pockets and bending his head forward a little, he put in practice his ventriloquism.

"Hit me again, you brute!" said the donkey, in a hollow voice.

The man turned deadly pale and dropped his stick, which, however, he at once eagerly stooped and picked up.

"Who stole the cabbages?" again repeated the animal, this time being heard by several of the persons present.

"Who is having a lark with me?" said the man, lubricating his hands in a way peculiar to his class, and then turning his cudgel round and round. "Let him come on! Don't speak till at once!"

"Why do you starve and ill-treat me?" cried the patient-looking and innocent animal.

The excitement now became great. Men and women crowded round, while the eyes of the beast danced with rage. Most of them around him, knowing his sordid and brutal character, were overjoyed at his confusion. The babel of voices was so great that young Arthur Everton was unable to carry on his trick. He accordingly walked away, followed shortly after by the amazed showman, who had no idea how able he was in this particular line.

"You must be careful," he whispered. "If these yokels find you out they'll tar and feather you."

"I am not afraid," laughed Arthur. "Do you see that great fat girl, which the old woman there is gloating over? Just bargain for it, and see if we don't have some fun."

The showman, who was not indisposed to humor himself, nodded, and walking up to the woman, addressed her:—

"Fine pig, mother."

"Fat as butter, sir; just ready for killing," replied the old dame.

"How much?"

The woman, who, as usual, was prepared for the customary beating down, asked a long price.

"Twice two much," cried the showman, "ain't it, piggy?"

"Yes, more than twice," muttered the ex-beast.

"Heaven save us!" exclaimed the alarmed woman.

"You see," went on her tormentor, with a grim smile, "was anything is more truthful than yourself. Why should you be sold so cheap?"

"Measley!" said the other, with a grunt, to wind up the response with a clincher.

The bystanders roared, but the woman, now receiving a hint as to who her interlocutor was, burst into a towering passion and belabored the showman most lustily.

"On my honor," said Shallaba, gravely, "it is no trick of mine."

"You shabby, conjuring vagabond!" cried the infuriated market woman, "call my pig measley—you hog-looking cheat! Wanted to spoil my market, did you? I'll teach you!"

And snatching up a stick, with which she drove her pigs to the market, she flew at the supposed culprit, and would have made short work with him, but that he beat a hasty retreat. The angry woman was about to return to her sow, when the pig, which was lying down in an attitude of supreme content on the straw, appeared to address its owner in confidential and remonstrative tones.

"But you know I am measley."

A terrific blow on the pig's back was the response, and, fearing to cause the beast further grief, our hero moved away, with a serious face, leaving the excited market-people to discover the mystery as best they might. Congo could not help laughing heartily at the whole affair, but he advised Arthur to be particularly careful upon whom he played such tricks. Such customers as the colliers are well known to be would not be nice in their way of taking revenge. Few men are so quick and ready in their way of treating any one against whom they have a grudge. That evening Arthur appeared on the stage in his character of ventriloquist, and excited the usual admiration and applause from all parts of the house. But some rather significant hints he heard from the pit made him conclude to be rather careful of what he did in public again. He promised to reserve his talent for his professional hours, unless he exercised it in private for the amusement of his friends. The season at Coalville now drawing to a close, it became necessary to decide on some coarse of action. The caravan was going to a celebrated fair, where a very large harvest was usually to be obtained; and as Charles Everton would most likely follow them, it behoved Arthur's identity should as much as possible be concealed. At last a plan was hit upon, which promised to be successful, and which we shall develop as we proceed.

CHAPTER XXVI.
ON THE TRAMP.

The theatre was closed, the caravan was loaded, the wagonette, now a permanent institution, had received its load, and the journey had commenced. As usual, a tolerable crowd collected to see them off. Among these, with a slouched hat, a dark cloak concealing his form, was Silas Grigg, who, for some reason or other, had such a hatred of the man known to us as Shallaba, or Congo the Conjuror. But his eyes were not so much fixed upon the man he detested as upon his company. Nowhere in caravan, on wagon, or in wagonette was the youthful stowaway to be seen. He had watched them all leave the inn, which had been their headquarters, and the youth was not amongst them. What he could want with Arthur was a mystery which, probably, time will unravel. He was keen in search of him, but without result, and he went away to report his failure to his employer, who was no other than Charles Everton. Probably, had he been at his post about an hour earlier, he might have had some explanation of the mystery. About that time there sallied forth from the side-yard of the inn a youth, brown, tanned and with curly black hair, who carried on his back a light, newly-invented organ, on the top of which reposed in great state and solemnity, a sleek and happy looking monkey. It requires no ghost to tell our readers that these two were Arthur Everton and his friend Jocko. The disguise was one which promised impunity. It was soon tried. As he walked along with his instrument behind him, and using a regular quarter-staff as a cane, he passed an hotel, in front of which was an open carriage. In this carriage sat the white-haired gentleman who had abducted the showman's wife and daughter—and his own mother. He passed slowly by without raising his eyes a second time, lest in time to see Charles Everton come out and join the party, his countenance white with suppressed anger and fury. Never had he looked more fiendish and diabolical.

Arthur went on, assuming the slouching gait of the Italian idlers who come to England to avoid serving their native land. But he need not have feared detection. This was a disguise which there was no fear, just then, of any one penetrating. How wildly the boy's heart beat at the sight of his pale, thoughtful mother, and how he wondered at what could be the connection between his stepfather, the old gentleman, and the showman's family. He had become singularly attached to them, drawn on, it appeared, by a mysterious sympathy, for which he could not very well account, much as he wished to do so. While these thoughts were passing through his head he had gained the outskirts of the town. It was his wish to pass along as much unnoticed as possible, and for this purpose he had been very careful to understand his itinerary, which for a long way was through a wild district of country, moor, wood and water, the latter spreading out in some places like lakes. There were several hamlets and villages by the way, and here it behoved the youth to rest, and even to play his organ occasionally, as well as to accept such gratuities as were likely to be offered to him in such poor places. The day passed pleasantly enough. On one or two occasions he got a very good lift from one village to another, generally stopping at a farm-house to play to the children by way of payment. The monkey was a great favorite, being good-tempered and comical.

In this way Arthur got further on his way than he expected, and was doubtful whether to put up at a village an hour before sundown, or to trudge on. As the inn was not very inviting, he resolved on the latter. The road he was now launched on was in the midst of a level, with, however, in the distance, some lofty trees, which he was given to understand were near a small hamlet. The high road was winding, and Arthur resolved to keep his eye upon the distant trees, and then make his way in that direction, an error of judgment only too common on the part of youth. Soon the shadows fell, and Arthur found himself entangled in a narrow winding pathway between two lakes. In the distance he could make out the trees. But the path was longer than the highway; and our hero was beginning to repent his having left the latter, when a faint light rose in the distance, apparently in a hollow. He hesitated a moment. In all probability he was coming upon a camp of Gipsies, hawkers, or tramps, and it was a question whether, as a stranger, he would be safe among such questionable company. There was one thing to be said. Among vagabonds of all races and colors there was a wondrous fellow feeling, and he might even receive a welcome. He determined to follow up his adventure; still he advanced cautiously. At the expiration of another half hour he clearly made out the character of the illumination. A ruined hut, situated in a low hollow, surrounded on most sides by trees, was lit up by a large fire. He again approached, the monkey peering over his shoulder, and looked through the open window. Four such ruffians as he had seldom seen were seated at a table well provided with food and drink. The former was thrust on one side, but the latter was being enjoyed in company with unlimited smoke, the necessary luxury of the poor. Their faces were disfigured by means of a mask of soot and coal, so as to leave much to the imagination. Arthur watched them for a moment, hesitating to address them. Then he heard one of them speak.

"It's Squire Benton's turn next. I'll teach him to lag a poor fellow! If he'd never spoke up against Franks, he'd ha' got off."

"We'll fire his house and cut his weasand!" said a second.

"And no later than to-night. The red cock shall crow in his barn before morning!"

Arthur waited to hear no more. The society he had fallen into was only too obvious. Some years ago, from a variety of causes, incendiarism, the most cruel and vindictive form of revenge ever invented by man, was common in England, and in the district of which we now speak a band arose, who were known as the Wold Rangers. Their devastations were terrible, swift, and, in too many cases, utterly beyond the power of justice to reach. The house, the barn, the hamlet of an Squire Benton there the matter ended. Swiftly they came, and swiftly they fled. Many were their friends, and multifarious the ramifications of the society. Hiding places innumerable were offered them, and impunity was the consequence. Arthur had heard of their doings with horror, the more that, in many instances, they did not confine themselves to arson and robbery. Murders of the most atrocious kind were perpetrated. As he walked away, with slow and cautious steps, he reflected on these things. What should he do? A fearful crime was in contemplation. But who was to be the sufferer? Any warning which he, a supposed Italian tramp, might give, would be disregarded. But it was his duty to try. He soon got out of reach of the Wold Rangers, and continued his route. Again were the trees in sight. He walked as fast as he could towards them. He was beginning to be tired. Soon he came in sight of the first house in the village, which was a mansion of large dimensions. He noticed behind, in the direction from which he had come, numerous hay stacks, corn ricks and farm buildings. If this should be the place! Well, how to enter!—how reach the proper person? He would try. Presently he found himself near some stables, and with a gate opening into a large yard. He boldly entered and began to play. His organ was new, had good tunes, and he knew how to play it perfectly. There is a grade of merit even in organ-grinding. No sooner was he fairly at work than a number of domestics appeared. His eyes, however, were fixed upon a brilliantly lighted room above, where, probably, the family were collected together. Would that he could make them hear! Presently a girl brought him out a handful of halfpence.

"Is this Squire Benton's?" said the supposed Italian, in a loud voice.

"Yes. Why?"

"Could I see him?" he earnestly cried.

"Why, you are crazy!" laughed the girl.

"Do you all want to be burnt in your beds before morning?" said Arthur, sternly.

The girl shrieked and ran away. Five minutes later an elderly male servant appeared and bade the organist follow him. Arthur obeyed and soon reached a library, where he was told to rest himself. He did so by taking off his organ and seating his monkey on it. Five minutes more elapsed and then a middle aged, portly gentleman, entered hurriedly, with a dark and anxious frown upon his countenance.

"Young man," he said, "did you mean anything by the words I accidentally overheard from my window?"

"Yes, sir," replied Arthur. "Crossing the moor, I overheard a plot to burn, and, I fear, murder you, if you are Squire Benton."

"I am. Tell me all you heard."

Arthur did so.

"It is well. You must be tired and need refreshment. While I provide for the reception of these gentlemen, you can take both. But"—here he looked keenly at the disguised boy—"will you have it here or in the kitchen?"

"Here," said Arthur, blushing through his tanned skin, "if you have no objection."

"I thought so," replied the other, with a grim smile. "Now, mark me; not a word to any one of what you have told me. You have done me a great—an incalculable service. Heaven only knows the misery you have prevented!"

As he spoke he rang the bell and was answered by the solemn butler.

"Give this youth the best the house affords—here," said the master; "then let him have George's room."

"But, sir," put in Arthur, after the other had retired to obey orders, a little puzzled, "you will not retire to rest to-night."

"We must appear to do nothing unusual. These demons of fire never act before twelve. Rely upon it, there shall be no harm done to rick, or barn, or house—thanks to you. The inmates of this house will sleep as usual."

"But I could not, sir. I should like to see what happens."

"You shall, my lad. But take an hour or so of repose, and lock up your attendant."

With these words he hastened away. Arthur, who was tired, exhausted and hungry, welcomed the refreshment, sitting over his dinner for a long time. He was about, however, to propose retirement, the very loneliness making him sleepy, when the door burst open and six children, half girls and half boys, entered. The youngest was six, the elder girl sweet seventeen. She alone was shy and timid, the other ones rushing up to stare at the monkey and the organ, the former being busily engaged in cracking nuts.

Arthur rose with such a graceful bow as made the elder girl stare and blush. He saw what the little ones wanted, so, putting the organ on a chair, he began to play, setting the monkey to dance and go through his drill and varied antics.

"You see," said the Squire, suddenly entering the room, "why I have so much to be grateful for. These are my choicest treasures. I hope they are not tiring you."

"I am only too happy, sir, to amuse them," replied Arthur, with a gratified smile.

"But the little ones must to bed; it is time," said the father, laughingly.

It may be expected, with the attraction of an organ and a monkey, that his order was not very readily obeyed, and it was only when reinforced by a nursery governess and some maids that the rebellion could be subdued.

"My wife will thank you to-morrow," said the Squire, when they were alone.

"You will excuse me if I know not how to treat you. You are not what you seem."

"I am not. I am a gentleman by birth and education," replied Arthur; "but for reasons, innocent on my part, I desire to remain as I am."

"Well, your secret shall be respected. Follow me," said the Squire.

And he led the way into a drawing-room, where his wife and eldest daughter now were alone.

"My dears," he said, "I am under the most inestimable obligation to this young gentleman, who appears before you in this strange attire. Be sure that for what he has done no thanks that I can give will ever be adequate; but for the detail you must wait until to-morrow. In the meantime, entertain him as a friend."

And the gentleman, who had not lost a moment, was once more out of the room. The astonished lady and her daughter knew the master of the house well enough to be aware that he would not speak lightly, and soon finding the superior nature of Arthur's character, conversed with him until it was time to retire. Arthur then was led to his room, where he soon slept soundly, lying on the bed in his clothes. At two the Squire awoke him. He was up at a bound. All lights were out save a small dark lanterns, and the two slowly descended the carpeted stairs.

GYMNASTIC BELL RINGING.

In the hall were four servants armed, who followed the Squire's men out towards the farm-buildings, and the whole which surrounded lawn, shrubbery and yard. The Squire went out towards the farm-buildings, and here again were found farm-laborers and constables, who all lay in dark corners. Every eye was cast in the direction of the Weld. An hour passed, during which the darkness became more and more intense. Several began to think it was a false alarm. Then the heavy steps were heard approaching. Eight men in a line, walking with a kind were perpetrated. As he walked away, with slow and cautious steps, he reflected on these things. What should he do? A fearful crime was in contemplation. But who was to be the sufferer? Any warning which he, a supposed Italian tramp, might give, would be disregarded. But it was his duty to try. A. H. K., New Orleans.—No official time is taken in England in racing. The fastest recorded time of a horse in harness is 2:17¼, made by Dutton and Goldsmith Maid, in 1871; the fastest mile, 1:39¾, by Lyttleton, 2:24¼; three miles, 5:37½, by Norfolk.

BARRY, Fort Wayne, Ind.—It is not time but speed decided authoritatively who is the best straight leg dancer in this country, and we decline to express any opinion in this department.

MUSICAL.—Wachtel is said to have received $1,000, and Santley $500 per night. He's cannot vouch for it, however, as opera managers are most given to fibbing.

W. C., Denver, Col.—The Astor Place riot commenced May 7th, and was continued on the 10th, the most serious demonstration taking place on the latter date.

H. N. N., Washington, D. C.—The dealer and beggar may mutually agree on a new deal, without the consent of the other players.

COUNAS, Washington.—The party who bet that the losing nine would not get over ten points loses, as they scored 11 to the winning club's 9, eleven innings being played.

H. S.—1. London, Eng., is the largest and most populous city in the world. 2. The distance apart of the poles at the place where the last is made should decide the question.

T. B. Wricksville, O.—You will have the duty to pay, besides expressage, and altogether it will cost you somewhere about $30 to get the gun over.

H. M. W., Boston, Mass.—1. The length of the Derby course, at Epsom, is 1½ miles. 2. Only three year olds can run for the Derby, the entries for which are made when yearlings.

CHARLESTON, Ottawa.—In such an important case, we should advise you to consult a competent lawyer on the subject. We are not sufficiently acquainted with such matters to offer an opinion.

2224, Phila.—A can play a jury provided he holds one in his hand, on the pile of cards, and could be seven, but he cannot use the jury on the table to do so.

M. S., Johnstown, Pa.—We have no knowledge of the company formed in this city to go to Australia, and doubt if such exists. Perhaps some of readers can inform us respecting it.

H. C., Decatur.—No official time is taken on the English turf, and consequently there is no reliable record of the fastest time in racing there.

R. D. C., Huntington, Pa.—"A and S were throwing dice. A threw 10, and B then bet that he could beat it. He threw and tied. Who wins the bet?"—A wins.

R. S., Bath, O.—Nothing for deal at old sledge, high deals. 2. The American Hoyle is an authority in some, but not in all games.

H. H. M.—Bill Harrington fought Andy McLane near Baltimore, May 1, 1866, and John McLane at Hoboken, N. J., in the year 1859.

G. L., Lynn, Mass.—That style of performance is becoming "played out;" the supply of performers is greater than the demand, and consequently salaries run as low as $15 per week.

LENOX.—In cutting for deal at cribbage, all the court cards are valued as tens; consequently, when a ten and a court card, or two court cards are cut for deal, the former is the dealer.

J. H. T., Ottawa.—1. If you commence dealing three cards, you must continue to deal around. 2. You cannot deal three to each of the others and two to yourself on the same round.

J. B.—Thank you; it will be a valuable addition to the collection we are now publishing.

PEOT.—No. 3, by touching the cue ball, as stated, made a foul, and therefore was not entitled to the numbered ball pocketed.

STARLIGHT, Wampsonville.—Trout can be taken from the 16th of March up to the 1st of September.

B. W. C.—At casino, you can build two or more piles at the same time.

FRANK HAMILTON.—The Mansfields have been admitted as contributors.

H. C., Wall street.—They were championship games, of which the Mutuals have won four, and the Baltimores four, in April.

HARRY SOMERS.—There is no champion skater now. If there is, Charles Currie is the man.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

You are all aware, no doubt, or ought to be, that the Dolly Vardey Convention at Cincinnati nominated Horace Greeley as a Liberal candidate for the Presidency of these United States. Now we do not wish to be understood as dictating to the country what its proper course should be in this matter, for a free and enlightened "sodality of peoples" needs no advice at our hands when such an all-absorbing subject as President-making engages their attention; but we have a duty to perform to the "fourth estate," to that profession of which we are an humble member, and no punctilious ideas of delicacy shall deter us from doing our duty in the premises, be the consequences what they may.

In the first place, then, the nomination of Horace Greeley is our golden opportunity, which we must at once take advantage of or continue to be, as we have always been, "hewers of wood and drawers of water," upon whose shoulders the weak and ignorant have heretofore ridden into place and power. This is the first time in the history of "the greatest nation on the face of the globe" that one of us has been nominated for the lofty position of President of the American confederation, and it behooves us, as fellows of "the art preservative of all art," to put our shoulders to the wheel in an uncommon cause, and by every aid in our power to give our fellow-craftsman such a boost as will land him and his white coat and white hat into the White House at Washington. It is the first "shy," we repeat, that we have had at the golden goose, and we must bring down the game, or perish in the attempt. We owe it to Mr. Greeley, we owe it to society, but more than all we owe it to ourselves, to boldly take the bull by the horns, and use it to our purpose. Should Mr. Greeley be successful through our united efforts, every editor, and publisher, and reporter, and compositor, and pressman in the country may be sure of an appointment; for as newspaper people are credited with knowing everything, so the venerable philosopher of Spruce street would see the advantage of surrounding himself with such living, walking encyclopedias of useful and universal information as can be found in no other profession, and this we say with all due deference to the gentlemen of the bench, the bar, and the pulpit. The nomination took us, as it took Mr. Greeley, "completely by surprise," and though when the news reached him it was "the happiest moment of his life," he made no idiotic demonstration as other candidates have done, but quietly and humbly accepted the honors thrust upon him.

We have no quarrel with General Grant "or any other man." We battled alongside of him through all the trials and vicissitudes of grim-visaged war, and had the honor of being declared a "veteran" in the cause of our country's vitality. From the rock-bound ridges of Chickamauga to the Plains of Abraham and the blood-stained fields of the Wilderness, we stood shoulder to shoulder with General Grant in the face of a powerful adversary, and saw thousands of human beings slaughtered in defence of a living principle. We assisted in elevating our leader to the highest office in the gift of a grateful people. But we have a duty to perform to ourselves in the campaign we have just entered upon. Private interests are at stake—the nation's life is in the issue—we alone can save it. We must seize the golden opportunity ere it is caught in the devastating avalanche of a tidal wave, and lost to all eternity—lost, forever lost. We speak not as democrats, not as republicans, not as liberals, for we know none of these, but we do speak as printers, and editors, and publishers of the great city of New York, and we call upon the craft everywhere to emerge from the bondage in which they have so long been held, and battle for their own and their country's welfare.

Postscript—"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and "who would be free themselves must strike the blow."

ROBSON AND THE TRAGEDIAN.

Stuart Robson delivered a lecture in New Orleans on Sunday, April 28th (of which a notice appears in our dramatic department), in the course of which he related the following anecdote:—

One day, a few summers ago, I had occasion to enter a street car in Philadelphia. It contained but few passengers—a pair of tired women, their laps encumbered with market baskets as big almost as themselves; a large man with a small voice, who mistook me for a friend, and accosted me accordingly; a dude, a necktie, perhaps, which I am fond of wearing occasionally, as I have an idea that it lends an air of becomingness to—

Lord Dalmouth entered by a Queen's Messenger, by Trumpeter, dam Queen Bertha, by Kingston.....

There were eleven other starters.

On Friday, May 3d, the other great event of the meeting—the race for the Two Thousand Guinea Stakes—was run, owing to the general inferiority of the two year old fillies, which ran last year, less attention was attracted by the race than is usually the case. Of eleven entered and paying forfeit, but five fillies came to the post, the favorite at the odds of 1 to 7 against her, while against the single exception of the surly-looking gentleman, whose head still reeking from the stock, all at once the little creature stopped, looked timidly towards him, then—as if half afraid of the liberty she was taking—picked a rosebud from the flower basket, and, trotting up to the gentleman, laid it on the counter in an unassuming button-hole of the coat worn by the surly-looking gentleman, whose head still reeked on the stock. The movement roused him—he lifted his head—took in the situation at a glance—looked down on the little darling, who ran laughingly back to her mother, and—never thanked her! To women, the man's conduct may have appeared heartless and unfeeling, but I watched him closely and, though he scarcely changed his position, his eyes never left her until the stopping of a passenger, by a signal, and, as he did so, I discovered they were filled with tears. The car moved on, but until it was lost to view he stood looking gloomily towards us. This man was a hero; his great tragedian, Edwin Forrest, and we met next assured that the unpremeditated act of this pretty little child affected him more than many of the great honors which have been showered on this lonely, childless gentleman.

THE TURF.

RACING AT NEWMARKET, ENG.

PRINCE CHARLIE WINS THE TWO THOUSAND GUINEAS, AND REINE THE ONE THOUSAND.

The New Market Spring Meeting was held last week, commencing on April 23th, and on the day following there assembled the largest gathering on the Heath, to witness the sixty-fourth annual contest for the Two Thousand Guinea Stakes. The weather was really magnificent, and the betting on the race very heavy, Prince Charlie starting at the very small odds of only 7 to 4 against him, to 1 and 1 to 4 against Cremorne, and 12 to 1 against Queen's Messenger. The race was handsomely contested, Cremorne taking the lead, closely followed by the favorite until the rising ground was reached, when Prince Charlie drew ahead, and, after a hard and fair struggle, finished a neck ahead. Summary:—

THE TWO THOUSAND GUINEA STAKES of 100 sovs. each, half forfeit, for three year old colts and fillies; colts to carry 122 pounds and fillies 117 pounds; the second to receive 200 sovereigns out of the stakes and the third to save his stake. Closed with 81 subscribers. Value of stakes, £4,780. A dash of a mile and 17 yards.

 A fearful cyclone visited Madras, E. I., on may 1st,

AQUATICS.

THE COMING FALL-OARED RACE.—On the 20th of the present month the first pair-oared race of consequence ever pulled on American waters will take place on the Schuylkill river, and the event attracts great attention among rowing men and admirers of the pastime, not only because of the novelty thereof, but on account of the prominence of three of the principals—Henry Coulter, on the one side, and John and Barney Biglin on the other. Lew Cavitt, Coulter's partner, is not known outside of his home, not having participated in a public race heretofore, but he is respected by a powerful oarsman and a fit companion for so fine a rower as the champion, weighing, in fine condition, about 155 lbs., and having been, as it were, brought up on the river. He and Hen have been for weeks doing a large amount of rowing on the Allegheny and Ohio rivers, the waters of which have the shores of their native city, and are now said to be in excellent trim, though it will be necessary for Coulter to reduce himself considerably still, ere he attains perfection. They will leave Allegheny on the 15th inst., for Philadelphia, where they will be domiciled at the house of Mr. Joseph Mixon, Fairmount. The host in which they purpose rowing for fame and "them two thousand" was built by Coulter, of Spanish cedar, and is described as a beauty. She is 30 feet in length and 15¼ inches wide amidships. The Biglin brothers, who are to uphold the honor of the metropolis on the eventful day, have been taking their breathings on Newtown creek, L. I., where they are more sheltered from the high winds prevalent at this season of the year than on the rivers hereabout. Both are now in first-rate fettle, and when they put on the finishing touches on the Schuylkill will, their friends say, rest assured, be as fine as needles in point of condition. They were to leave for Philadelphia on the 7th inst., and while there will take up their quarters at one of the boat houses of the Schuylkill Navy, the use of which has been kindly tendered them. John will also give his attention to training several of the crews there who propose taking part in the forthcoming amateur regatta, to be held in June. The balance of the stake-money, $500 a side, has to go up on the 15th inst., when the referee must be chosen.

THE SCHUYLKILL REGATTA.—The committee having in charge the arrangements for the approaching amateur aquatic meeting at Philadelphia, are studiously working to insure its success. Information was received last week that the Quicks and Nassaus, of this city, will enter for the four-oar shell race as soon as formal club action can be obtained. R. B. Deeley, of the former, has entered for the shell race, and the struggle between him and the Quaker City Champion, John Lavers, is expected to be very exciting. The Crescent Club, of the Schuylkill Navy, held a meeting on April 29th, and decided to enter for the four-oar shell, four-oar gig, six-oar gunwale barge, and double scull shell races. The crew for the four-oar boats will be selected from among the following gentlemen:—W. C. Rehn, H. L. Wimer, W. C. Brown, T. B. Harper, S. A. Welsh, H. F. Darlington and W. S. Haines. The double shell will be pulled by W. A. and C. K. Steel, and the crew for the gunwale barge will be selected and announced before the 15th of May, the time of closing entries.

SCULLING AT PITTSBURGH.—The first aquatic event of the season took place on the afternoon of the 4th inst. on the Allegheny river, Pittsburgh, between Wm. Smith, of the J. B. Jones Boat Club, and Ed. Powell, of the Howard Boat Club. It was for $100 a side, distance three miles, starting from the suspension bridge, one and a half miles up the river and return. The start was made a little after 5 o'clock, Powell taking the lead, he having the side near the shore, and, consequently, had not much current to pull against. It was a very close and exciting race for the first mile, but here Smith took the lead and increased it to the finish, winning by at least 300 yards. The race did not draw a large crowd, it being a little too cold for such sport. The betting was very light—principally at evens—the men being new ones for aquatic honors. Henry Coulter and Lew Cavitt guided Smith over the course, while a four-oared boat filled the same position for Powell. James Boyd was referee.

THE AMERICA CREW'S MEDALS.—We have delivered to the fortunate members of the four-oared crew of the shell "America" the handsome medals presented to them by a few appreciative friends residing at Halifax, N. S., in commemoration of the creditable part taken by them in the international regatta held there last year. On their behalf we return to the donors sincere thanks for these totally unexpected tokens of esteem, which will be sacredly cherished by the recipients, who will never cease to remember, with feelings of pleasure and gratitude, their visit to Halifax, and the unlooked for kindness and hospitality they experienced at the hands of utter strangers. They will strive never to do ought to lessen the esteem in which they are held by their Haligonian friends.

POTOMAC BOAT CLUB.—This Washington, D. C., club, held a meeting on the 1st inst., when the proposition to form a District Navy was considered, and the conclusion reached was that it would be inexpedient at the present time to do so. The challenge of the Annapolis club (composed of the naval class of 1873) was not accepted, for the reason that the Annapolis boys refuse to row a private race on the Potomac. The committee to which was referred the invitation of the Schuylkill navy to participate in the national regatta at Philadelphia, between the 6th and 15th of June, reported favorably to its acceptance, and the report of the committee was adopted.

BUTLER VS. SCHARFF.—A referee and final stakeholder, agreeable to both parties, for the match between Tom Butler and Billy Scharff, has been secured in the person of Mr. Philip J. Hoffiger, of the Quaker City, to whom we will transmit articles of agreement and monies now deposited. The earnestness with which the principals are buckling to the work of preparation evinces that their whole souls are in the match, and that whoever wins will be fully entitled, barring accident, to all the honors attaching to victory in honest competition.

JIMMY HAMILL is training Billy Scharff for his coming race with Butler, and will leave Pittsburgh about the 25th inst. for Philadelphia, accompanied by the ex-champion and several members of the McKee Club. From what we can learn, the people of that section fancy Billy greatly, and will be ready to stake as much upon him as the Hubites and Deasies, notwithstanding the greater reputation of the Massachusetts pet.

A CABLE DISPATCH states that the Earl of Dufferin, the newly-appointed Governor-General of Canada, will sail from Liverpool for New York on June 11th. He will send his yacht in advance, and during a brief sojourn in the metropolis will probably take part in some of the races of the New York Yacht Club.

THE LIVE OAK ROWING CLUB, of Buffalo, N. Y., lately elected the following officers for 1873:—President, James Carroll; secretary, Samuel Carroll; treasurer, Herbert Willis; captain, Michael Hazel. The Black Rock and Pratt clubs were organized at that place this spring, and the Kingston brothers are about forming a club.

THE ATALANTAS, having established themselves at Hammersmith, have been taking regular daily practice upon the Thames, commencing on April 30th, and their style is favorably commented upon by the press of London, as well as by boating men generally.

THE Q. Q. Q. ASSOCIATION, a Buffalo, N. Y., boating organization, is officered as follows:—President, Hamilton Holt; vice-president, Robt. Palen; secretary and treasurer, Wm. T. Parsons; captain, Harry Walbridge. They have ordered a new four-oared shell from Charley Elliott.

ERIN LOSSE, the champion light-weight sculler of the Atalantas, has received an invitation from an American gentleman now in England, to visit that country and participate in some of the prominent amateur regattas on the Thames. It isn't likely that he will go.

UNDINE.—An election was held by the Undine Boat Club, of Rockford, Ill., recently, the following gentlemen being chosen officers:—President, H. N. Starr; secretary, W. T. Robertson; treasurer, G. T. Page; directors, C. A. Sandborn and W. T. Robertson.

MR. W. COOPER, who some years ago was a constant contributor to the yachting columns of Bell's Life, under the nom de plume of "Vanderdecken," died at Dublin, Ireland, on April 27th, after a long and painful illness.

THE JERSEY CITY YACHT CLUB lately held their annual election, resulting as follows:—Commodore, S. Hill; vice-commodore, C. A. Smith; treasurer, A. B. Reynolds; secretary, F. Higham; measurer, W. Chester.

MOORE AND DEWITT, of the California Club, and N. and M. White, of the Pacific, rowed a double scull race at San Francisco, Cal., recently. The former got off with the lead, but lost the race by rounding an outside boat through mistake.

MR. CHARLES B. ELLIOTT, the celebrated builder of racing boats, entered upon his duties as police justice at Greenport, L. I., on May 1st, he having been elected to that office in November last.

JOHN BIGLIN'S services as trainer have been solicited by several amateur boating organizations in different sections, but his match with Coulter and Cavitt precludes the possibility of his acceptance at present.

A "MERMAID" CLUB is, we learn, in contemplation by a number of young ladies residing at Yonkers, N. Y., who have a penchant for aquatic sports.

COULTER AND CAVITT are to take a benefit at Trimble's Varieties Theatre on the evening of the 9th inst., prior to their departure for Philadelphia.

A SINGLE SCULL SHELL, built by Robt. Jewett, Dunston, Eng., and intended for Ellis Ward, arrived here by the steamer City of Baltimore on April 29th.

THE RING.

MACE AND O'BALDWIN.—In response to a note from the temporary stakeholder, Mr. Ed. James, Ned. O'Baldwin wrote last week, saying that he desires fresh articles drawn up before the money is transferred to the gentleman chosen for final stakeholder, and requesting that Mace go to Philadelphia, or send a representative for that purpose. Upon this being made known to Jim, he thought such action was uncalled for, but concluded that, in order to have the matter finally adjusted, he would do as the giant requested. He will accordingly send a representative to the Quaker City on Thursday, 9th inst., with instructions to have articles drawn up, embodying the same conditions as the original ones, save in the matter of stakeholder and the amount to be fought for (he being willing to make it for as much or little as O'Baldwin wishes), which latter need to amend for that purpose at Jim Colbert's, "The Woodbine," No. 228 Arch street, between the hours of two and four o'clock P. M.

DEATH OF JAS. W. HUNTER, OF BROOKLYN.—We regret to learn of the demise of this once well known sporting man, which occurred on Tuesday, April 30th, in Brooklyn. For some time past Hunter had been laboring under aberration of mind, and while in this state fired the contents of a revolver at a woman, with whom he was said to be on terms of intimacy. For this he was temporarily removed to an insane asylum. Hunter, some eighteen years ago or so, used to figure very prominently at sparring and other public exhibitions, and, for many years was engaged by the wholesale liquor business at 96 Fulton street, Brooklyn, from which place he was buried on Thursday, May 2d. Deceased was a native of Ireland, and about 42 years of age.

EDWARDS AND CHAMBERS.—Billy Edwards wishes us to state that he cannot entertain the proposition made by Arthur Chambers to fight at 122 lbs., as it would be sheer nonsense for him to try to reduce himself to that weight. He will not fight below 126 lbs., at which figure he is willing to mill with anybody in the world, bar none, for $1,000 a side, or more. He will meet any acceptor at his office on Friday, May 10th, between 1 and 3 o'clock P. M.

WAY DOWN SOUTH IN GEORGIA.—The square built American pugilist, Ed. Wilson, has recently returned from a trip to the capitol of Georgia, looking as fresh as a three year old. While in Savannah he was a lion of the city, and but for the warm weather it is not uncertain but that he would have anchored there. Next winter will likely see the Albanian in business there.

DAN CARR writes to us saying that he is matched with Jim Taylor, and, therefore, cannot at present accommodate Mike O'Connor, as the latter well knew when he sent his money to this office with his challenge. Carr says, however, that he will cover Mike's deposit and make a match to fight for from $300 to $600 a side the day succeeding the mill with Taylor.

PROF. NED DONNELLY, one of the most scientific boxers of London, Eng., sailed from this port for home by the steamship Cuba, on May 1st, after a few days' sojourn in the metropolis, his visit being purely one of pleasure. Ned has always a large class of students of the art of fistic at his rooms in Golden square, and has given instruction to many scions of nobility.

JIM CAWLEY took a "ben." at Seddons and Clark's on the 4th inst., the sparrers who appeared being as follows:—Eddy and Smith, Dillon and Alf. Peey, Arthur Chambers and Cunningham, of Manchester, Emerson and Mack, Larrigan and Sidor, George Seddons and Fox, Steve Taylor and Sam Thompson, and the wind-up between the beneficiary and Thomas.

BOXING BOUT WITH BLACKED BUCKSKINS.—Patsy Sheppard and Arthur Chambers have entered into an agreement to spar with blacked gloves at Harry Hill's, 26 East Houston street, on the afternoon of Thursday, May 9th.

COL. T. H. MONSTENY, the famous swordsman and professor of the art of self-defence, has removed his academy to No. 13 Eighth street, Clinton place, where he will be prepared to give instruction in those branches of physical education daily.

THE PROPOSED CHAMPIONSHIP HAND-BALL MATCH.—We are in receipt of a communication from Messrs. O'Brien and Foley, the hand-ball experts of Chicago, regarding their proposed match with Phil. Casey's Brooklyn men. They offer some what different proposal to that made by Phil. last week, fixing the number of games to be played as ten instead of fifteen, twenty-one aces to constitute each game, and the winners of the first six to receive the stake; five straight games to be played in Chicago, on June 8th, and the balance at Brooklyn, on the 18th of the same month (or any other date that will suit the Brooklynites). If the contest should result in a tie, they will toss for choice of place to play the second game. Shortly subsequent to its reception Casey called at the office, and upon being made acquainted with the above facts, said that the conditions suited him, save in regard to the time of playing, he considering the 18th proximo too late. He drew up the signed articles, however, naming the 8th of June and 1st of July as the respective dates on which to play at Chicago and Brooklyn, which after being signed by James Everard, Phil's partner, were forwarded to Chicago. The other stipulations of the protocol are that the match shall be for five hundred dollars a side and the championship, that each party shall bear their own expenses, and shall each furnish six balls, which are to be placed together in the alley, for the use of the players mutually; that play shall begin between 12 M. and 2 P. M., on the days above named; that Hon. John Morrissey shall be final stakeholder (in case he declines, then some other person must be chosen at the time of putting up the last deposit), and that each party shall appoint a judge, who shall agree upon a referee. We now hold fifty dollars from each side, which must be increased—providing the articles suit the westerners—to $250 a side on May 20th; the final deposit, $250 from each, to be staked on June 15th, at the CLIPPER office.

HON. JOHN MORRISSEY offers to wager $5,000 that Horace Greeley will carry the State of New York; $5,000 that he will carry Pennsylvania, and $5,000 that he will be elected President, providing no nomination is made by the Democratic party.

CRICKET.

THE ST. GEORGE CLUB.—Efforts are to be made this season to get up a revival of cricket in this country by the St. George and Manhattan Clubs, the only organizations which appear to be in practical operation. The St. George Club have now an excellent enclosed ground, located at the West end of Ninth street, Hoboken, N. J., which is in a fine condition, and having imported a new professional, they prospect to get up a strong eleven to meet the Philadelphia club. The St. George Club will open the season at Hoboken on Thursday, May 9th, when sides will be chosen at 11 noon for an afternoon's play. The ground has been staked off for the club for Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; the Knickerbocker Base Ball Club occupy it on Fridays, and the Manhattan Club on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The rule on regular match days (the season will be commenced play each day on two day games at 12 M., and on one day games at 11 A. M.

CRICKETERS VS. BALL PLAYERS.—We hope the St. George Club will get up a series of enjoyable meetings at cricket and base ball between the three clubs occupying the enclosed cricket field at Hoboken. The Knickerbockers would, no doubt, like to give the cricketers a base ball and secure cricket lessons in return. Let the St. Georges get up a base ball nine from their club like the Philadelphia cricketers have done, and challenge the Knickerbockers.

THE NEW YORK CLUB.—We scarcely know whether this old club is in existence or not. Jimmy Smith started it afresh last year, but it requires more than one man to place a club on its feet.

A NEW CLUB AT STATEN ISLAND.—That liberal and earnest worker for cricket, Mr. Carter, of the St. George Club, has organized a new club on Staten Island, and he proposes to open play in a match with the St. George eleven in June next.

A NEW CRICKET CLUB, to be known as the Union City, has been organized at Nanuatuck, Conn., and has already over fifty members. The 17th of May has been fixed upon as the opening day.

THE PHILADELPHIA CRICKET CLUB have secured the fine grounds of the Germantown Club, and on May 4th opened play for the season with a club match.

H. STUBBERFIELD, a young and skillful bowler, of Sussex, Eng., arrived here last week, under engagement to the St. George Cricket Club.

THE MANHATTAN CLUB.—This club will open play on May 11th, at 1 P. M., at which hour sides will be chosen.

THEATRICAL RECORD.

M. THEODORE BARRIERE is the author of a new comedy, called "Alix," which was to have been produced at the Gymnase, Paris, France, on April 30th.

MISS MARRIOTT commenced an engagement at the Theatre Royal, Greenock, Scotland, on April 16th, opening as Jeanie Deans.

MISS KATE BATEMAN was the star at the Theatre Royal, Leeds, Eng., commencing on the 15th ult. with "Leah," which was repeated on the 16th, "Mary Warner" and the "Lady of Lyons" filling out the week.

AN ADAPTATION, by Mr. C. Rice, of Scott's "Kenilworth," was the attraction at the Royal Amphitheatre, Liverpool, Eng., and met with success. The adapter has almost more at a series of effective tableaux than literary excellence.

BARRY SULLIVAN appeared all the week at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, Eng., in a round of his favorite characters, to excellent business.

"DOLLY VARDEN," a new version of Mr. Chas. Dickens' "Barnaby Rudge," was acted by Miss Virginia Blackwood's company at the Amphitheatre, Leeds, Eng., during the week commencing April 15th.

W. E. HOLLAND'S dramatic company, with Miss Effie Johns as the stellar feature, commenced their fourth week in Demerara, British Guiana, on April 8th, playing the "Ticket-of-Leave Man" and "Lotty's Troubles." The entertainments that evening were under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor.

"NANY" is the title of a new four-act comedy, by MM. Weilhac and Najac, produced on April 12th at the Theatre Francais, Paris, France, and which made a hit. Nany is an ambitious mother, whose son, Pierre, is an artist. The young painter is in love, but his mother exerts every good and evil influence to prevent the union, which, according to her ideas, would enervate his mind and prevent his realizing the grand things he is to do. The match takes place, and the action of the piece, which is well constructed, terminates with the unpleasant spectacle of the mother exclaiming that the son is lost to her.

AN ACCIDENT recently took place at the Gaite, Paris, France, which might have been attended with shocking results. At the termination of the Pompeian scene in "Le Roi Carotte" four of the principal characters are carried away on the back of an enormous dragon. Just as the monster reached the flies, a rope unaccountably gave way, and, to the terror of a densely packed audience, the whole machine came down with a run, and disappeared with a crash underneath the stage. Luckily, however, none of the players—among whom were two ladies, including M'lle Zulma Bouffar—were hurt; all escaped with a few insignificant bruises.

MISS NEILSON, who commenced a twelve nights' engagement at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, Eng., on April 22d, was announced to make her last appearances there "prior to her appearance in America."

MRS. MARY GLAUSTANE commenced an engagement at the Theatre Royal, Hobart Town, Australia, on Feb. 19th, and during her stay the following pieces were produced:—"Elizabeth," "From Frou," "Mary Stuart," "East Lynne," "Leah" and "The Mysteries of Audley Court."

Musical.

At the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, London, Eng., the opera of "La Favorita" was produced on April 18th, M. Faure taking the place of Sig. Cotogni, who was indisposed, and Madame Lucca appeared in her old part of Leonora, sustained by Mr. Gye's new tenor, Signor Nicolini, who, says the Sunday Times, proved more successful than, under such circumstances, might have been expected. He had evidently studied Mario's Fernando well, and his reproduction of it, at certain points, was unmistakably close. Generally, however, Signor Nicolini gave satisfaction, which would have found a warmer expression but for the fact that everybody present was thinking of his great predecessor. The scene in which Fernando breaks his sword and repudiates the king's honors fell flat, just because in it the inevitable contrast was most damaging. This apart, Signor Nicolini may be congratulated upon his discharge of a very difficult task. Sig. Faure's Alfonso is also greatly praised, being characterized as the best performance of the character, either in a vocal or a dramatic sense, witnessed upon the English stage of late years. The favorite "Romance," sung by him in Act 3, was the vocal success of the evening. "La Traviata" was presented on the 16th and 20th ults., "Fra Diavolo" on the 18th, "La Favorita" on the 19th, and on the 23d, Mlle. Lucca was to personate Marguerite in "Faust."..... "La Figlia del Reggimento" was produced to a crowded audience at Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane, on April 13th, Mlle. Marimon's impersonation of Maria being a pronounced success, which is not strange, considering how often she appeared in the same role last season, and the favor she then was held on in the provinces. Mad. Trebelli-Bettini making her first appearance this season in the character of the page, Urbano. She met with a warm reception. Mlle. Titiens sustained the part of Valentina, and Sig. Fancelli shared the honors with her in the rendering of the great duet. "La Sonnambula" was repeated on the 18th, "La Figlia" on the 20th, and on the 22d, Titiens and Trebelli were to appear together in "Semiramide."

OFFENBACH'S "Black Corsair" is in rehearsal at Vienna, Austria. The opera bouffe will be produced under the direction of the author.

MAD. ALBONI, the Countess of Pepoli, has consented to return to the lyric stage, in Paris, France, and was announced to appear at the Italian Opera House.

SIGNOR ARDITI and MADAME PATTI will return to London, from Vienna, on May 1st. The following is taken from the Vienna Free:—"Foremost in company with Patti is Luigi Arditi. It is but natural that the composer of 'Il Baccio' should rank first in her music-loving circle, for none as Arditi does ever inspirate to a first-rate conductor he is the favorite of everybody as a pleasant and genial companion. He has just composed for Patti (as he did formerly for Piccolomini, 'Il Baccio,') a little piece which bids fair to make the grave-makers of all nations blush. The title thing is called 'Forosetta,' and it is in the form of a tarantella. It is the most charming coquettish piece of music imaginable, and, as Patti herself (who has one only as yet sung it to quite an intimate circle of friends) says, it is the most charming she has ever sung."

A PUPIL of Signor Marchesi, a Mlle. Smerowski, has made a highly successful début as a vocalist, at the Paris Opera, as Rosina, in "Il Barbiere." She sang Rode's variations for the singing lesson. She is no actress. The French papers state that she is engaged for Covent Garden and for St. Petersburgh for 1873-4.

THERE is to be a Michael Angelo festival in Florence, Italy, soon, on a scale equal to the great Dante celebration.

WALTER, the principal tenor of the Imperial Opera in Vienna, is going to London, Eng., for the season.

SIGNOR ARDITI and Mme. Patti were to return to London from Vienna on May 1st.

THE monument to Franz Schubert, the composer, at Vienna, will be inaugurated on May 15th.

MISS LOUIE HENRI, who, since her first appearance at the Gaiety, in 1868, has made rapid progress, and whose name is identified with Mr. George Leclerq's "Princess of Trebizonde" company, is about leaving England for Paris, where, at the Conservatoire, she intends studying for the lyric stage.

Variety Halls.

THE LONDON, ENG., VARIETY HALLS were without novelty. Upon the occasion of Mr. G. W. Nugent's benefit, at the Cambridge, on April 18th, a number of performers not regularly engaged appeared..... The work of decorating the Middlesex, which has been greatly enlarged and improved, had not yet been completed, but had advanced considerably since Easter.....An immense bill was presented at the Winchester on the 17th ult., when the proprietor took his annual benefit. While performing upon the lofty wire, the supports gave way, and Signor D'Alti fell heavily to the stage; fortunately, however, he escaped uninjured.....At the Alhambra, on May 20th—Whitsuntide—"King Carrot" is to be presented in an elaborate manner, the directors having voted for £5,000. They pay Offenbach for the use of the music £60 per week. Miss Elise Holt is to play the principal female character.

MR. VALENTINE VOSS had been amusing the patrons of Connell's Music Hall, Dublin, Ireland, with his ventriloquial entertainment, which introduces the novelty of a mechanical talking monkey.

MONS. D'ARC'S MARIONETTES had met with so much favor at Queen's Hall, Liverpool, Eng., that they were kept on the boards, the lessee of the hall having purchased the exhibition.

M'LLE GRACE LUCILLE, who for a space of fifteen months had been unable to attend to her professional duties, took a benefit at Alexandra Hall, Manchester, Eng., on April 12th, appearing in her original part in the Demon ballet. Messrs. French, Langley, Barnes and Leslie, of the Slave Troupe, went from Liverpool to assist. Henri Clark, comedian, began a twelve nights' engagement there on the 15th ult.

TOM SAYERS, while performing at the Oxford, Newcastle, Eng., recently, was presented with a gold medal by William Elliott and family.

MISS KATE VAUGHAN and her troupe of Parisian danseuses (four in number), together with El Chico Humel, the juvenile horizontal bar performer, who does a double somersault, were the main attractions at Gordon's, Southampton, Eng.

HARRY CLIFTON and company gave a concert at Falmouth, Eng., on April 15th.

ACCIDENT TO THE RIZARELLIS.—One of these clever and daring acrobats met with a severe accident at the Oxford Music Hall, London, Eng., April 13th, which had precluded the possibility of their appearance thereafter up to the latest advices. After accomplishing their various feats, they prepared to descend, but no sooner had one of them entrusted his person to the rope used for that purpose than—made rotten, it is supposed, by the gas—it parted, and the acrobat fell heavily to the stage, being picked up insensible. He was progressing favorably and hoped soon to be able to resume his profession.

THE CHATEAU D'EAU, Paris, France, is to be transformed into an immense music and concert hall, after the style of the Alhambra Palace, London, Eng., the performances to embrace ballet, gymnastics, etc.

THE CAFE DES AMBASSADEURS, in the Champs Elysees, Paris, France, opened for the summer season on April 14th. This is the most fashionable establishment of the kind in the city, and is always well attended. The stage is a handsome pavillion, covered with plate glass and handsomely lighted up. The lady members of the troupe, tastefully attired in full evening dress, sit upon chairs placed round the platform, coming forward in turn, and after their song is ended resuming their seats. The "star" performers, however, only appear when wanted.

THE CAFE CONCERT DE LA PERIERAIE, Paris, France, has been partially destroyed by fire, the dressing-rooms being burnt down. The comic singer, Revel, was the great attraction at the entertainments, which had not been interrupted.

Negro Minstrelsy.

MOORE AND BURGESS MINSTRELS were still sweeping all before them at St. James Hall, London, Eng., the Easter programme being continued, to the delight of large audiences.....Rawinson and Kraser's Prince of Wales' Minstrels appear at the Britannia Theatre nightly.

THE QUEEN'S MINSTRELS appeared at Bath, Eng., during the week ending on the 20th ult.

THE LATEST NOVELTY presented to the public of Liverpool, Eng., by Hague's Slave Troupe, is the introduction of a train of cars in motion on the stage. The house was nightly crowded.

BERNARD AND ARTHUR THORN OF CHRISTYS opened at Plymouth, Eng., on the 15th ult.

CAMPBELL AND RENDORA'S CHRISTYS were at Queenstown, Eng. The company includes A. Campbell, Carlo and A. Rendora, G. Sedman, R. Ferris, the New York Clipper Boy, Ballantine, G. Kempton, Pedro Starling and Ferrent.

MATHEW'S CASEY'S MINSTRELS gave an entertainment at Stamford, Eng., on April 16th.

THE Virginia Female Christys performed at Worcester, Eng., April 12th and 13th.

T. T. TUTH'S MINSTRELS occupied Town Hall, Yeovil, Eng., on April 11th and drew a large audience.

Circuses.

COOK'S ROYAL CIRCUS was doing well at Chester, Eng. On April 15th, the tight-rope artist, John Milton Hengler, made his first appearance there this season, as did also W. Sedon. W. Bell, the famous jockey, closed his engagement on the 20th, and proceeded to Germany.

ADAMS' CIRCUS was performing in a large wooden building, erected by the proprietor, at Blackburn, Eng.....Ginnett's Royal Circus gave two performances at Bridgewater, Eng., April 16th.....Powell and Clarke's Grand Circus was at Bury St. Edmunds, Eng., on the 16th ult.....Hengler's Circus was at Hull, Eng.....Newsome's Circus was well patronized at Louth, Eng., the feature being "Turpin's Ride to York."..... Bostock and Wombwell's Menagerie visited Langton, Eng., on April 17th..... Hander's Menagerie left Macclesfield, Eng., on the 17th ult..... Sanger's Grand Circus pitched tents at Sheffield, Eng., on April 17th, for a six days' stay.....Bell and Hutchinson's Circus made a two days' stand at Swindon, Eng., 12th and 13th.

Miscellaneous.

COMMENDABLE change had been made by Mr. Maccabe in his entertainment, rendering it more attractive, and the Charing Cross Theatre, London, Eng., crowded nightly. His wonderful versatility is exhibited in a surprising degree in the operatic and mele-dramatic burlesque of "Sir Rowland, the Rattler." His transformation of voice, dress and manner, is said to be marvelous.....The Royal Surrey Gardens, which for years past have been occupied as the temporary hospital of St. Thomas, were rapidly being transformed, under the directorship of Mr. Frederick Strange, who has obtained possession, from a wilderness to an attractive resort. They will be opened during the present month.....Mr. W. Holland and Mr. W. H. Payne were in Paris, securing novelties for the approaching season at Woolwich Gardens, and were said to be in treaty for something likely to create a sensation in the English metropolis.

W. S. WOODIN, the polyphonist, gave his carpet bag entertainment at Bristol, Eng., on April 15th and 16th.

THE Messrs. Hamilton, with their "Pictorial Excursions to the Continent and Back," were at Nottingham, Eng.

FLEMING NORTON had been doing a good business with his "Furkins' Picnic," at Portsmouth, Eng.

LAGGED.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

My Mossitus pals, I'm a doin' my streich,
All for a tween-eyed hen;
I cracked her knob with a jockum gun,
Cos she took me for a hen.
She tried to make a Doctor Green o' me,
My leery culls, yer know,
Bo I gev hir a taste of Oliver's skull,
And an out and out lambo.

Yer see I was on finer dobing lay,
Fambling and prigging swag,
When my lady-bird picked a joskin up
And pulled away the bag;
And wot do yer think was in his dip?
Forty cocs and a jack,
And a super red she drew itherwise
From out the yokel's sack.

She cherried away to a boosing ken
Arter doin' that 'ere job,
And with hot wax and ribbon red
Began mending her nob;
Says I, "My Mab, just lip my quote;"
Says she, "Strike your dixie dead!
But the coppers have beat me out o' ther blunt,
And left me narry a red."

That took me slamort—"My dopey,
Show yer wid!" roared I,
And I ripped her milky-duds from her back
And made her smicket fly;
Way down is her vamper I found the verge,
And thirty canes high,
And, O, my pals, if you were me,
As I did wouldn't yer do?

In course, with the jerry I cracked her pate—
O, lordy! didn't she shriek!
In tumbled a couple of booly dogs,
And dragged me afore the beak;
So here I am a doin' my stretch,
All for a planting tack (tack),
As tried to wheedle a leery cove
And bounce him out of his whack.

UNCLE SCHNEIDER'S SKETCHES.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY MARK QUENCHER.

DOT ELOBEMENTS.

"You don'd vas mean to dold me dot you hafe refused to got married py der hands of Misder Greenbex, vas id?" smoke a faderly looking fader to his putiful daughder, Gretchen, plushed herself fird-rade, vile she answered mit shiowfulness:—

"Yes, fader, so I did gif him der refusals."

"You leedle, disopedience female, vat you vas mean py sudch a dings like dot conduct, ennerhow, don'd id? Dos'd you vas know dot old Misder Greenbex vas peen locked ond for your husbands on count he vas rich like Methusalah—or some of dot fellers—und dot vood bought you efery ding, und sdill he besides in negaro doo, neider?"

"Oh, yes, misder fader," she reblied herself, "I know me all dot, but, nodmitstanding—vich is a pig vords for sudch a shimall gal like my size, I vood not hafe him vif he vas dwice couple times so richer, on cound he vas old enuff to peen my mudder, und pesides, he vas got a paldy head. Vat vood id gain a young gal if she gained a whole fordune, mit a paldy head, vad? Dot's my arckuments, babe; vat you think dhey high vas for?"

"I dink dhey vas so high dot you git locked mit der bedrooms ub undil you coom pack mit your six or sefen senses. Now, Miss Daughder, blease some marks put on my vordts. You shall peen locked ub py der neck in der rooms undil you vas ready to manufadture a abologies to Greenbex, und afderwards got married py him. Now, vat high for dis vas dot, vell?"

Ad dis unchendelmanly sbeeches der Gretchen vas got bale faces mit madness. Her leedle noses vas got dangerous, und her breaths vas known to come und go. Soon she shooded her fader mit her eyes, vat vas got blazes, dot he vas git frighdened boud hisself, und, in a quite manly voices, she made dis oradion her mound out:—

"My dear fader, Esquire, dear sir, your dings vat you choosd shbeaked vas recefied mit duly. In rebly, I vood abdadic, dot so far from gid behaved py dis, I vas fill py scorn py you. Now, if my vords a lisden. I vill nefer peen der Mrs. Greenbex. I hade dot old codfishes vorse as a Younk Man's Chrisdian Association voodend dook a trink—und vorse too, neider, py chinks. Uf I vas to peen gvardered und drawn und hung und kicked pesides, I voodend after dot, efen, marry dot anciend roosder. So dot vas der seddlemends mit dot. Und now brebare your godbreakin for some more lasdest news. I tells me dot speak a feller, Chonny Mog-Ginniss! Ha Ho! vat you dink, vad?"

Ad dis declarashons, der fader vas almosd right peside of hiself mit exdonishments.

"Vad!" he visdled, mit a hisses py his lungs. "Vad!" You lofe dot Mog-Ginness! A feller vat vas doo boor snuff do efen keep you in vashvoomans. Yy, you vas a lunadic sayiyns, mit a mind-chacke as dhrown in. Unt if you a forbid dot you shall efen vonce more efen vink a vordt ad dot Mog-Ginness, who vas a bead, und——"

"Misder Fader!" she inderrubded, mit a dhunder und lightening voices, as she dhrew py her full height ub on her heels; "fader, I vill nod heard Mog-Ginniss shbeaked of in dot loose vay. He vas a shbiainded man, und uf he vas got vings, he vood made a sugcessful angel. Vad uf he vas boor, und blain, und boferdy? Vad uf he only schpanded von shird efery dwo weeks? He can'd helb dot. Und I vood nod gone back (cooms here dears py her schnood) on my Mog-Ginniss, nod efen uf he had to vore a shird a whole months, py chinks. He vas got blaindy exbenses (shifers her voice), bud he vas got broud (looks py der vail ub), und goot-lookin boferdy like Mog-Ginness vas bedder as paidy-headed luxury like ol Greenbex. Dot's biease vidh you, my shaines, vich you bibe in. Und now do your vorst, I don'd vas fraid."

Her fader, in rebly, made choosd a cubble of restless mofements, vot dhey vas you coold imagine, ven I say dot in oggsackdly dwo minudes und dwo-halfs aider Gredchen finished her shbeeches, she cood peen saw locked py her ped-rooms tight in, und sdayn py herself:—"Cy gracious, how qvick I vas got boosded ub here, sure enuf."

* * * * * * *

"Winny-nimy, now blease coom," a younk feller blayfully called ond on dop of a ladders py der vindow ut a bedrooms. Dot vas Mog-Ginniss, und der feller inside vas der Gretchen. Dhey vas manufadduring some elobements ond. Soon Gretchen shdebbed der vine py, und dhey vas qvick shooking hands mit dhere fibs.

"Ho dime cood peen load," says he.

"Ah! dit der mooside shead," she said.

Und dhey vent. Dhey coomed agross a man vat vas in der minister pissness. When dhey vent in dhey vas dwo of dhem—when dhey coomed ond dhere vas von of dhem. "Vad vas put dogedder, don'd blease led some oder von put giose abart." "Nod some cartds." Dot vas all explained.

Ve vas so far shdeered our shdory all goot enuff, und ve vlie to shdop. Bud dhere vas der fader. Vat shall be be done mid him? Vell, I dink you bedder "git away" mit him der besd vay you vish. "You buys your choice and you dooks your moneys."

You might make him chumb to der fadal vindow, saw der remains of der ladder, und dumble, gone didn't in his dracks, on cound of der consciences. Or you might shun und oldt Greenbex dogedder mit a choily old "bust" on cound of dis elopement, und hafe dhem gone diedt any vay you vish. So eferypoddy vood peen sadisfied.

* * * * * * * * *

Der morals vas dot uf faders don'd shdob der "inderferences" mit dheir daughder's lofers, dhey vood peen dreaded choosd so gareless und mysderious, as vas dis ader, in dis shdory, vich vas now coom shdopped py der endt ond.

A GERMAN CIRCUS AND OTHER SHOWS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY HAMILTON.

A circus seems to be the same thing in the land of the free and the home of the brave, in dull quiet Germany, and in sunny Italy. America appears to furnish the best and most daring riders; but we Shoddyian Circus might be transplanted to New York, and barring the fact that the Bowery boys would not understand the clown's gags, there would be nothing strange in the performance. The writer recently saw in Berlin, Renz's celebrated circus, and it seemed to him about the best he ever saw.

A good seat in the building (a permanent one, larger than the Fourteenth street place) could be obtained for twenty cents, and the bill was literally full of acts, occupying precisely four hours in its execution. The Germans can stand a deal of amusement, "right along on end," but an American would be dreadfully tired by a four hours' steady sitting.

"Lulu," the girl, who springs from ground upon a high platform, or rather is thrown up by a strong, nicely graduated spring, was the great card, and her performance, which the writer once described of the Clipper's readers, is unique. It will be seen, I trust, in this country, one of these days.

Renz, the owner of the circus, considers himself great at training trick horses, but his learned beasts cannot compare with Dan Rice's "Excelsior," or other American equine wonders. However, they are very interesting, apparently, to Germans, and he had three exhibitions of different ones. There was some very curious groups being balanced on each other's backs, and good juggling by Herr Agoust, who has been in this country, performing at the Tammany a year or two ago.

They run very much to clowns in Germany. At one time there were eight, at another time fifteen clowns in the ring! They grotesqued without any patter. The rest of the bill was made up of poor riding and a comic dance or two, and a very elaborate carnival scene, and, altogether, it seemed the most varied and liberal circus bill I have ever seen. No American or English names were in the programme. It was curious to see how exacting the hangers-on about the door and the loungers about the dressing room entrance resembled similar loiterers in America. There was the same "professional" air about them. But there were two huge porters at the entrance, the like of which have never been seen here, dressed in cocked hats and carrying huge drum major batons. No boy dared ask for a "check" under the glare of those eyes.

In Prague, the capital of Bohemia, the writer saw a crowd collected about a door in a "passage." The attraction therein proved to be:—

"MISS LOUISA RAHN,
Put Woman on New York."

A touching instance of American enterprise and liberality this; the growing, in the capital of the Empire State, a fat woman for Austria!

At Sanader's Shaw's in Liverpool, the greatest attraction was, last month:—

Group of American rattlesnakes, only one ever collected. Great expense.
(Here followed a quotation from Southey).
Bite is fatal to man in 3 minutes; to horse in 5 minutes.
Facts are stubborn things!

There was a very comical and unexpected bit of entertainment afforded to the writer on the evening of Feb. 7th, 1872, at the Victoria Salon, Waisenhausstrasse, No. 25, at Dresden, in Germany. This salon is one wherein the prices vary from 40 cents for the best, to 15 cents for the worst places. Even in the 15 cent one I had a good chair and table on which to rest his lager beer mug; for, moistening his clay is a necessity to a German at places of amusement. The entertainment was a variety one, the bill of course being in German. But in the middle of the programme, to my astonishment, I saw these announcements in bad English:—

"THE LADIES OF LIFE, produced from Miss Annie Townsend,"
and
"THE DANCE LIKE A FAIRY, vorgetragen von Miss Lillie Allston."

I was exceedingly curious to find out how a "lader" was going to be "produced" from a lady; but this feat turned out to be a bit of dying drapery business. But "The Dance Like a Fairy" was a song and dance in abominable English, by a female in tights. If she was a fair sample of a fairy, they are an exceedingly long-legged race. However, for the honor of our mother tongue, the four Americans present led an encore, which caused Miss Allston to sing "Up in a Balloon," while the orchestra performed a vocal chorus to the tune of "The Boatman's Dance." The whole affair was so unexpected, coming, as it did, upon one in the middle of Germany, as to be very laughable.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy! and only by thought that labor can be made happy.

BONES AS A MANAGER.

INTERLOCUTOR.—Mr. Bones, you appear to be in a loquacious humor to-night. Suppose you tell us about that little managerial experiment of yours.

BONES.—O, I didn't 'shamed to own it; I was a manager wonst—wouldn't a been b'rar playen' de banjo and makin' bad jokes for a libbin' if I hadn't been. You see, de Church o' de Holy Rollers hadn't been 'ceivin' nuffin' for some time, an' de shar'holdern had ter 'n'de 'Sheriff' defrayin' de bills for de whole congregation, 'cluded to shut pan on de 'vangelical kin, and so day sold out to me.

INT.—They sold out to you, sir? Why, where could you have got so much money?

BONES.—I got it de way dey gets dair stock in Wall street. I got elected to de vestry, and dey appraised de property, and den dey made me de auctioneer, and I knocked it down to myself for de pews ob ten cents—which was de 'mount of my capital.

INT.—You are well posted in the knocking down business, I've no doubt.

BONES.—You bet! Well, I got hold ob a stage struck carpenter to transmogrify de whole bilin' a Presbyter, an' de vestry dey all took stock into it, cause dey said freesayters paid better dan churches, anyhow. And de fust pussun dat come to me for a sit was de pastor herself. Tink o' dat, now. Gib us a specimen, said I. Wid dat he wrote Ophelia's speech 'fore de Senate.—"Step, step," says I, "you put in a whole lot o' stuff dat aint in de speech." "I gibs you a pint, on dat," says he. "Why am a bad part dat's gibben to an actor to play like an emetic." "Gib it up," says I. "'Cause it makes him gag and he frows it up," says he. And I engage him right off.

INT.—But how about his salary?

BONES.—O, I gabe him a lot of de bonds and he hypotecate dem.

INT.—I suppose you thought that, as speaking was his profession, he might as well begin at once.

BONES.—De nex' feller dat offer himself was a gemman ob de burnt cork perfession. "What can you play?" said I. "I plays de banjo," says he, smilin' troo de cork. "Wat can you play on it?" I ax; "can you play coley on it?" "No," says he, "but I can play seven up on it." And I took him right off too. Den dere comes along a leadin' lady, wid a book of Rummoes and Julips in her hand. And she gub me a taste o' what she could do widout askin'. "Scuse de liberty," says I, "but ain't you a little rough in your delibery?" "It's all right 'cordin' to Shakesey," says she, "for dosen't he say, 'De corse of true luv neber did run smoov'? and wasn't Julips de corse of Rummoes?" "Stop a minit," says I; "why am an article of summer wear for ladies like de heroine of a novel?" "I pass," said she. "Why," said I, "it's because it's best sweetin'." Hex' dere comes along a man wid a hump back. "Gimme a chance to play Richard," says he, "and I'll make tings sizzle." "Go cork your face," said I, "and I'll make a Black Crook of you." "I is de Black Crook," says he; "dat's why Richard am like the manager ob de show, he's a-killed his crooter." "Don't git your back up," said I; and off he slid, sayin' as he went, "You'd better work up yourself!" Den 'long comes a spry little feller wid a fiddle. "What can you do?" I axed. "I can crook de pregnant fingers ob de knee," said he, squodin' Shakespeer. "You'll do," said I. Jes' den I hear a flutterin' of gauzes and ribbons and a great whisperin' and titterin', and a strong odor of musk pervade de room, and den a lot o' pooty gals in short skirts come boppin' in like a lot o' grass hoppers. "Ole de ballet" dey reined out all togedder. And when de wote ob de stockholders was taken, blest if dey didn't all vote for de ballet too. Dat let me out, and I resign de management.

INT.—That let's you out here, too, and we will now listen to the great Wachtell in his new song:—

YOU REMEMBER, NELLIE DEAR.
BY ARTHUR W. FRENCH.

You remember the days that have gone, Nellie,
The days of long ago,
And the joys of life's earlier dawn, Nellie,
That both our hearts well know:
When we wandered so gay, side by side, Nellie,
While I called you my darling, my pride, Nellie,
And more than I can tell.
Chorus.—You remember the days that have gone, Nellie dear,
The days of long ago,
And the joys of life's earlier dawn, Nellie dear,
That both our hearts well know.

You remember that night by the gate, Nellie—
If you do not, I will tell—
When your lips spoke the words of my fate, Nellie,
For all this long life thro';
Where you gave me the first loving kiss, Nellie—
That was heaven to me—
Oh, I think of it yet with sweet bliss, Nellie,
It brings me back to thee.
Chorus.—You remember, &c.

You remember the church, quaint and old, Nellie,
With ivy round the door,
And the wedding was whispered and told, Nellie,
In days so long before.
We have faithfully kept every vow, Nellie,
We uttered then and there;
From the days of the past until now, Nellie,
We have never known a care.
Chorus.—You remember, &c.

EDWIN FORREST FORTY-THREE YEARS AGO.

We append two bills (kindly loaned to us by John B. Miller, Esq., of Bellefontaine, O.) of Mr. Edwin Forrest's performances in Philadelphia, at the Walnut Street Theatre, in the winter of 1829. He says that "the only persons now living, whose names are on those bills, besides Mr. Forrest, are Miss Waring (now Mrs. J. W. Wallack, Jr.,) and Miss Lane (now Mrs. John Drew), of the Arch Street Theatre:—

DOWN TO SEASIDE.

SONG AND DANCE.
Dedicated to Johnny Miller,
BY MATT. MARL.

Going down to Seaside I'll be one by your side,
Walking down upon the sand just above the tide,
See that wave advancing, o'er the beach it vaults,
And lingers longing on the sand, when the band begins that waltz.
Chorus—Cape May is very gay, Coney Beach has its faults,
But the seaside is festive when the band begins a waltz,
When the band begins a waltz, when the band begins a waltz,
The seaside is festive—when the band begin a waltz.

I met my little darling, we chatted on together,
Admiring the landscape, the music, and the weather;
I swore to her I'd e'er be true, I never could prove false,
She sighed:—"Oh! cheese it, Johnny, don't you hear that lovely waltz."
Chorus—Cape May is very gay, etc.

See the waves upon the beach dancing in their glee;
Rushing wildly to and fro, they're on a jolly spree;
Advancing as the music swells till at our feet it halts,
And seems to list enraptur'd to the music of that waltz.
Chorus—Cape May is very gay, etc.

The band continued playing, the music was so fine,
I asked the dear one by my side if she would not be mine;
She answered:—"Oh! give us a rest, you're worse than Epsom salts;
Oh! stop your buzzing, Johnny, do—and listen to that waltz."
Chorus—Cape May is very gay, etc.

DANCING BY DINAH ROSE AND COMPANY.

ABOUT AN OLD SONG.

ROYCE CLIFTON.—On first perusal the following lines might, to the virtuous mind—say that fighting editor—appear somewhat indelicate. To such prurient critics I would explain that the poem is designed for a companion piecesto that stirring lyric of Henry Ward Burcher's, entitled "I Don't Keer Her Sot a Moment," which enjoyed such extended popularity with the religious weeklies. FELIX QUILP.

"OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT."

One eve I passed a beer saloon, 'twas in the month of May,
I looked and saw a man be-tune a concer-ti-ni-a;
Then on the keys his hands he worked, with all his mats and might,
And with his concertina, jerked "Oft in the Stilly Night."

Again I walked, 'twas near the strand I took my promenade,
When suddenly a German band struck up a serenade;
I listened to this orchestra, amazed—as well I might—
For soon the band began to play "Oft in the Stilly Night."

One night I went to see a maid, she mused in reverie;
"Fair girl," I said, "be not afraid—you think, no doubt, of me—
Fond thoughts of me to memory bring, in rapture of delight."
She sat in silence, fingering "Oft in the Stilly Night."

Filled with the music's soft refrain, I sought to gain repose,
But through my brain each note and strain, in ripples ebbs and flows;
With haggard locks and hair unkempt, my rest was broken quite,
And in my sleep I'm sure I dreamt "Oft in the Stilly Night."

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

ELLEN O'MOORE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY H. R. H.

Oh, it was pitiful—
'Twas a whole city full,
Home she had none.—Hood.

Low sank the sun and earth's glories had faded—
Night's sombre curtain a dense city shaded—
Loud roared the wind, the fierce hailstones came rattling,
Mens with the hurricane cursed to be battling,
He, whom hard toil but made rest seem more pleasant,
Sought his snug cottage, and e'en the rude peasant
Hies to his home, where his loved ones' caresses
Hweeten his toil, and his generous blessings
Lulled now the rich in their parlors so splendid,
Giving no thought to the poor unbefriended
Orphan, now threading the streets in her sorrow,
Begging a morsel of bread for the morrow.
Thin were her garments and bare were her arms,
Few stopped to notice her innocent charms,
Few stopped to give her money or bread—
Low Herod! oh, debased heartless mankind!

Came there now one 'mong the few who were wending
Their way through the streets to the fierce tempest bending,
And noticed the girl in the chilly winds shivering,
Her delicate form like an aspen leaf quivering.
Noticed he there, by the flickering light
The street lamp afforded, a pitiful sight;
And yet it was beautiful—oh, she was fair,
With features so wonderful, clustering hair,
Eyes, in their innermost depths of whose treasure
Dwelt an affection which seemed without measure.
"Maiden," thus spoke he, "why forth at this hour,
When stormy winds revel in darkness and power;
With no one to shield from the pitiless storm,
Or insults of passers, thine innocent form!
Tell me thy name, and for what thou dost grieve;
Mayhap I thy sufferings can somewhat relieve;
Show me thy home—let me guard thee safe there;
Fierce is the tempest and chilly the air."

Dark was the room, and the snow flakes were flying
In through the cracks where a woman lay dying.
Death damp the locks were which lay on her brow,
Short were her breathings, aye, life ebbeth now;
Through all her form a strange numbness was creeping,
Death in oblivion her senses was steeping.
Say, must she die there alone, unbefriended,
And life be in sadness and solitude ended?

Slowly now opened the rickety door,
Entered now softly sweet Ellen O'Moore;
He, too, who kindly befriended her lot,
Guarding her home, he too entered the cot;
Entered, and noted the sufferings of those
Whom Poverty clad in her garment of woes:
Noted each want and their every demand.
Then quickly departed a man void of command,
Supplied them, and watched by the taper's dim light
The couch of the dying, the long, dreary night.
Watched he, as shorter grew each passing breath—
Watched he the agonies of death's wildest wrath.
Noted he, when the first sunlight was shed
O'er the low couch, that the spirit had fled.

Now, did the daughter with help from no other,
Dress for the grave the cold form of her mother;
Friends there had none, the stranger alone knew,
To whom she might look in her need for assistance.
Well did she know in the heart of the city
Selfishness lurked with no feeling of pity;
Well did she know the necessities made
Of the poor of her children in earth's bosom laid;
Well did she know that funereal glare
Always shone brighter if wealth were but there.
Alas! for the loneliness, Ellen O'Moore!
Dead lies thy mother—no friends have the poor.
No friends! yes, young Albert has told thy sad tale
Where never unheeded was poverty's wail.

Scarce was the widow's cold form laid to slumber,
When Ellen began to count moments to number;
Thinking of clouds that her pathway now shaded,
Thinking of hopes that had flattered but faded;
Fraying for strength all her trials to bear,
Even grateful for poverty's sufferings to dare.
Slowly such thoughts threw their bitterness o'er her,
When once again stood young Albert before her;
Stood he, as when on that dreadful night,
Stormy winds howling in terror and might,
Staid he his footsteps to list to the stranger,
Gave to her wants and protected from danger.

"Lonely one, come from thy cottage of sorrow;
Come, for thy day will dawn brighter to-morrow;
Come to my home, I've no sister nor brother;
Thou'll be my sister and child to my mother;
She now awaits there to soothe and to bless thee;
Love folds his wings there to cheer and caress thee."

Thus spoke young Albert; and Ellen O'Moore
Wept, as she thought of the bountiful store
Providence ever provides for all those
Who trust him through darkness, affliction and woes.

Long years have fled since the widow, so lonely,
Passed to her reward, her task only;
Long years have fled, and those bonds which are nearer
Than of fraternity, firmer, yet dearer,
Bind those two hearts in a bondage, the token
Of which a love that can never be broken.
Round their loved hearth gather life's greatest treasure,
Angel-like faces of gladness and pleasure,
Into whose ears when the storm-clouds are lowering
Tales of the poor the mother is pouring;
Bidding them never to turn a deaf ear
Unto distress, or pass misery's tear;
For, midst the numbers that flock past our door,
Perchance may be wandering some Ellen O'Moore.

THE BURROUGHS MURDER.

LIBBIE GARRABRANT TELLS HER OWN STORY.

The trial of the above named fair frail one for the murder of Ransom F. Burroughs took place last week at Paterson, N. J., before a crowded court each day, and Judges Bedle, Sanford, Terhune, Daggers and Barcalow. On Thursday, the 2d inst., the trial elicited greater attention, because then Libbie, the defendant, told her own story of the tragical event and her connection therewith, of which we give the following cursory account, preceded by her father's testimony, the first witness called for the defence:—

Peter Garrabrant, Libbie's father, is a very respectable appearing gentleman, who looks like a kind father as well. It was when he stepped forward to take the oath that Libbie first caught sight of him, and then the Wood, with sheets, and her eyes filled with tears. She couldn't help it. She covered her face with her handkerchief and wept, and the father's sad face told the rest of a life story. When Mr. Garrabrant took the stand Libbie's breast heaved with half suppressed sobs, and she bit her lips in a vain attempt to repress the emotion which overmastered her with. which was given in quiet tones, as follows:—

I am the father of the defendant. She is in her nineteenth year. I am superintendent of a ladies' boot and shoe manufactory in the city of New York. I have nine children, some younger and some older. Libbie lived with me up to the 1st of June last, a year ago. Two years ago this coming June. I always looked upon her as a child of mind and average of purity. Her capacity for learning was very poor. I live in Paterson and go to New York daily. Libbie ran away from the House of Correction. She lived with me since about a year until last July. I believe she was in the House of Correction on the 9th of June, when she had been there only nine days. She stayed at my house till her time would have been out. I think. She was at the House of Correction at the foot of Eighty-sixth street, New York. She can read and write some.

LIBBIE'S STORY.

Libbie was called at the conclusion of her father's evidence, to tell her own story. In this she did in a powerful mood and husky voice. She commenced by saying, in reply to interrogations from counsel:—I knew Mr. Burroughs. I went to his house to live on a Sunday, 1871. I don't know in what month. They kept a place for me there. The place was in Franklin street. He kept a place of that kind for young men to come. I gave him the money what we got from young men. I knew Van Winkle Bogert. He used to come to see me. We were engaged to get married. We were to be married on the 8th of February last. Van Winkle was acquainted with Burroughs. Van Winkle Bogert came down to my house and asked me if I wouldn't go for arsenic. He said they'd used it up in the house. I went for it. He told me to tell the doctor to give me some that was dry, because there were children around the house. I got fifteen cents' worth of arsenic. Van Winkle Bogert gave me the money to get it with. He gave me a two-cent piece to keep. I gave the arsenic to Van Winkle Bogert. He said he wanted to take it up home. He didn't say what he wanted it for. He told me what he wanted it for after he gave it to Charley. When he sent me for it he said he wanted it to take it to his brother's. I don't know as he said anything about what he wanted it for at his brother's. It was Monday after Thanksgiving that I bought it. It was about 5 o'clock in the afternoon when I gave it to him. Burroughs was taken sick about 9 o'clock the same day. Bogert was in the house when he was taken sick. I did not know what was the matter with Burroughs when he was first taken sick. On the morning I got the arsenic Burroughs was down to Lake View. He got home at 9 o'clock that night. When he got home Bogert was there, sitting in a rocking-chair. Bogert stayed at our house that night. I was out of the house and up to Mrs. Riley's that night till about 11 o'clock. I went over between half-past 9 and 10. Bogert went with me. After that we went over to Burroughs'. Got back about 11. When we got back Burroughs was home. When I first saw Burroughs sick I had no knowledge of what made him sick. Had a supper that night at quarter after 7, of beefsteak, potatoes, rice pudding, and tea. I went out for water about 7 o'clock. Charley came in just as I was coming up the stoop. When I went for the water Bogert was in the house, sitting in the rocking-chair he always went to when he came in. We had supper. The supper table was in the kitchen. The supper was on the table when I went out for the water. I was gone about ten minutes for the water. I had to go in the yard for it, where Mr. Lyon used to live, on the side of the lot, where we used to pump the water. I did not see that arsenic or any part of it after I gave it to Bogert. I gave him the paper and all. Bogert left Burroughs' the next afternoon. I next saw Bogert on Monday night at Burroughs'. Mr. Burroughs died on Sunday morning. Bogert left that Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock. He was there again on Wednesday. I was informed of Burroughs' sickness first on Wednesday night by Van Winkle Bogert.

Bogert stayed there all night Wednesday night, and left the next morning. I can't say whether he was there at all or not after that. He was there after Burroughs was dead. I was told by Bogert that it was that night Burroughs died. I told no person while he was alive what it was that made him sick. I don't know why. I can give a reason, but I don't want to. Before I got that information I did not know what made him sick. I liked the letter, and I have it now. Have had it ever since. [A title for the court.] I liked Van Winkle Bogert. I saw the paper that was produced here, said to have been found in Mr. Burroughs' pocket, with some writing on it, and I wrote it. Van Winkle Bogert was present when I wrote the paper I wrote it with. He told me and asked me to write what is on the paper. He told me the words to write. That paper was written on Wednesday. I had no pencil of my own. He carried his pencil in a book in his pocket. I saw Bogert at Burroughs' on Sunday night. Mel Moseley went with me. Kate Boyd was there when we went there. I think Mrs. Burroughs went to Trenton Saturday. "Mel" meeting me in jail when I went there. Mel had been in jail a month. I saw him in the jail yard. He spoke to me in River street, in front of Bill Post's office. I went to Germantown with him. I never spoke to him before. I saw him the Saturday before the Monday we went to Germantown we went down the plank road. We stopped at a German's hotel. I stayed there with him until 11 o'clock. All four of us, Bill Post, Mel Moseley and Van Winkie and me, were in the same room. After we came back from Burroughs' I made arrangements to stay at his house. Van Winkle Bogert came to see me every morning. Mr. Burroughs was keeping the saloon then. I slept with Kate Boyd. Sometimes I went out around the town. The night after that I kept coming to see me. He knew before that I was a girl of the town. I suppose his reason for running after me was the same as his going after other girls. He would come down on Saturday night and stay over Sunday. He slept with me there after Burroughs was dead. When he did so we didn't use to go into the room and look at Burroughs. Twice he did. The door into the back room was never burst open. It wouldn't shut, and Charley put the wood on so it wouldn't bang. We kept the key on the stairs. Before Thanksgiving Day Van Winkle came to see me every day. He slept with me at Burroughs'. I mean up to the week before Thanksgiving. He came once or twice a week. He never paid me any money. At the same time I had other men staying with me who did pay me money. I bought my own things at that time. I went up to his sister-in-law's two days before Thanksgiving to a dance, and his sister kept me there till Saturday. I came down then and went to Mr. Van's and stayed in the evening. Van Winkle came down with me. He stayed at Riley's till Burroughs came home. Then I went over there. Left Bogert at the stoop. The place at Paramus was a saloon. Cornelius Bogert's house. There was a dance there the night I went. We went up in the cars to Ridgewood. His father came for us there with a horse and wagon. Van Winkle Bogert spoke about our getting married at Riley's and up to his father's, entitled "I don't Keer Her Sot a Moment," which enjoyed such extended popularity with the religious weeklies. It was in the back kitchen, in the daytime. Charley Burroughs was there. I didn't say anything then. I don't think he was joking. I was engaged to be married on New Year's Day, but it was postponed. He spoke about it two days before. (The witness missed a moment.) No. I was in jail then; it was the day after Christmas. He stayed with me at Burroughs' house Christmas night. It was Sunday night we started for Paramus. Christmas night Bogert met me at Riley's. John Riley was there and Gilbert and the boys, and a young lady that lived down stairs. She was a married woman named Wannamacker. At 12 or 1 o'clock we went to Burroughs' house and slept there. Came out the house next morning about 7 o'clock and got breakfast at Mrs. Riley's. Then he went home and I went down town. I did not see Bogert again after that Christmas night. Me and Rachel Speer went to Paramus the day the body was found. Went to his brother's. After Monks was at the house I saw Burroughs dead and then went to Paramus. I did not say anything to Van Winkle Bogert about it. I meant it to be understood that Van Winkle put the arsenic in the pudding, and that when I saw Van Winkle at Paramus

THE BOSTON CLUB'S FIRST TOUR.

BOSTON vs. OLYMPIC, OF PHILADELPHIA.

The Boston nine played the first game of their first southern tour for 1872 on April 29th, in Philadelphia, on which occasion they met the Olympic amateurs, a nine which, the week before, had played a game with the Athletics by a score of 9 to 5. The desire to see the famous "Reds" was so great that, notwithstanding the anticipations of a sure victory, fully two thousand spectators were gathered to witness the match, and it proved to be a noteworthy display, and one highly creditable to the Olympics. In the early part of the game the "Reds" had it all their own way, the close of the fifth innings showing the score to be 13 to 1 in favor of Boston. Afterwards the amateurs made a grand rally at the bat, and in the last four innings scored 6 runs to the Bostons' 2, leaving the totals at the close at 15 to 9, with the "Reds" in the van. The score below tells the story:—

THE BEST DISPLAY OF THE SEASON.

BALTIMORE VS. BOSTON.

The finest display of ball playing yet seen this season was that which marked the first championship match between the Baltimore and Boston nines, which took place at Newington Park on May 2d. The Baltimore American, which gives a good report of the contest, says:—"The weather was all that could have been desired, and the attendance of spectators was immense. Within the enclosure the crowd was larger than at any previous game. The ladies' stand was very comfortably filled with a fair representation of the beauty and fashion of Baltimore. Owing to the condition of Craver's fingers, Higham took his place and caught behind the bat, while Craver went to third base, and suffered martyrdom when balls were driven in that direction. Matthews, whom a great many had begun to consider an incubus, after his pitching against the Mutuals, covered himself with glory, and very clearly demonstrated that with full restoration to health he can hold his own with any pitcher in America. Shortly after 3 o'clock the Boston nine appeared, and drew forth a spontaneous burst of applause. They are, by all odds, the best trained and heaviest nine in the country, and the two brothers, Harry and George Wright, appear to have been brought into the world for the sole purpose of playing base ball. Their appearance produced anything but a feeling of re-assurance among the backers of the Baltimores, and the result was that very little money changed hands.

THE GAME

was called by the umpire at half-past three o'clock, and the Baltimores, having won the toss, placed their opponents at the bat.

First Innings.—George Wright took the bat and was put out at first. Barnes followed suit in very short order, and Leonard was neatly captured by a fly to York in the left field. No runs.

Radcliff, on the part of the Baltimores, knocked a ball to George Wright, who held it, and Craver, taking his place, surrendered on a foul bound to McVey. Pike went out on three strikes, McVey taking the ball on the bound. No runs.

Second Innings.—Spaulding on a foul bound to Higham. Gould sent a splendid fly to centre field, which was well taken by Hall at top speed. No runs. Fisher went out on a fly to Leonard, and York on the first. Higham earned his base by a ball to left field, and made his second and third on a strike from Mills, which gave the latter his first. Mills was forced to second by a strike from Hall, but failed to reach it. No runs.

H. Rogers was disposed of by a foul taken by Higham. Schaeffer yielded on a beautiful fly taken by York, who did the same thing immediately afterwards to Harry Wright. No runs. Hall made his first on a hit to right. Matthews hit through Spalding and took his base, sending Hall to second. Radcliff forced Hall at third and took his first, Matthews scoring. Craver out on a foul fly to Leonard. Pike hit through Leonard, made first, and Radcliff out at home on throw of Schaeffer to McVey. One run.

Third Innings.—George Wright made first on a hit too high for Mills to hold. Barnes made his first on a short fly to centre. Leonard out on a foul bound to Higham. George Wright and Barnes came home on a throw of Higham's to second. Pike muffing. McVey out on a fly to York. Spaulding took his first on a good hit to left centre, and Gould brought him home on a long hit to centre, the striker setting on third. Rogers out at first on a hit to Matthews. Three runs. Craver took first on an overthrow of George Wright. Pike took first on a low hit to first, sending Craver to second. Fisher forced Pike at second and reached first. Craver going to third. York hit to Spaulding, who overthrew to first, the striker taking his base and Craver scoring. Higham made first on a fair foul to left, York scoring and Fisher going out at the home plate on a throw of Schaeffer's. Mills out at first on a fair foul, captured by McVey. Two runs.

Fourth Innings.—Hall on a liner to Pike; H. Wright out on a hit to Matthews, who rather than risk a throw to first ran Harry out. George Wright took up the ash and hit him for a homer, scoring just ahead of the ball as it was fielded in; Barnes made his first on a hit to centre; Leonard out on a fly to Pike. One run. Hall out on a foul fly to Rogers; Matthews out at first on a fair foul to Leonard, Radcliff out on a fly to Schaeffer. No runs. Score, four to three in favor of Boston.

Fifth Innings.—McVey out on a fly to Hall; Spaulding out on a fly to Radcliff, and Gould out at first on a bounder to Radcliff. No runs. Craver out at first on a hit to Spalding. Pike made his first on a clean hit to right. Fisher out at first on a hit to Barnes. York out on a foul fly to Leonard. No runs. Score still four to three in favor of Boston.

Sixth Innings.—Rogers hit to left and took second. Schaeffer out on a foul tip to Higham. H. Wright out on a fly to Hall, and George Wright out on a foul fly to Craver, Rogers being left on his second. No runs. Higham out on a fly well taken by Schaeffer, and Mills out on a foul bound taken by Schaeffer. Hall made his second on a good hit to centre, and Matthews went out on a foul fly to McVey, leaving Hall on his second. No runs. Score unaltered.

Seventh Innings.—Barnes took first on a hit to Radcliff. Leonard out on a fly to Hall, Barnes going to third. McVey took first on a hit to centre, Barnes scoring. Spaulding out on a fly to Hall, and Gould out on a fly to Radcliff. One run. Radcliff out on a fly to Barnes. Craver out on three called strikes. Pike out on a hit to Gould. No runs. Score five to three in favor of Boston.

Eighth Innings.—Rogers out on a fly to Pike. Schaeffer out on a foul fly to York. H. Wright took first on a hit to left, and George Wright hit to Craver, forcing Harry at second. No run. Baltimore here went in for two runs to tie and three to beat. Fisher was the first striker, and went out on a foul bound to McVey. York took first on a hit to George Wright, Gould muffing the throw. Higham took first on a good hit to right, York going to third. Mills out at first on a hit to Barnes, York home and Higham to third. Hall out at first on a hit to George Wright, and the game was lost by a score of five to four in favor of Boston. Below is the score:—

MUTUAL vs. MANSFIELD.

On Monday, April 29th, the Mansfield Club, of Middleton, Conn., which had been receiving their initiatory lessons in professional ball playing at Troy the previous week, visited Brooklyn to try their skill with the new Mutual nine, against whom they hoped to succeed better than they had done in Troy, inasmuch as in 1871 they had played a game with the Stars, with Cummings to pitch, marked by a score of 3 to 5 only. At Troy they had been defeated by a "Chicago" score of 10 to 0, and a Troy score of 27 to 10. This time the Mutuals "Chicagoed" them to the tune of 12 to 0, the Connecticut nine displaying very little judgment or skill in their handling of the bat, though their fielding was not so bad. The attendance was quite slim, and this was owing chiefly to the neglect of the club managers to give due publicity to the fact that the match was one of the championship series, and not a mere "exhibition" game, which latter the masses are not likely to patronise this year as they did last, but will, no doubt, keep away from professional games which are not fully announced as championship matches. The score below gives all further particulars in regard to this one sided contest. The score:—

ATLANTIC vs. BURNSIDE.

The amateur Burnsides played the professional Atlantics on April 30th on the Capitoline grounds, L. I., and though the Atlantics played one of their poorest fielding games, they managed to win by a score of 23 to 10. They handled McDermott's pitching pretty naughtily, scoring home runs with ease. The score below tells the story:—

BALL MATTERS AT NEW ORLEANS.—From the statement of a correspondent signing himself "Argus," it appears that the prospects of a brilliant ball season at New Orleans have never been so encouraging as now. The Louisiana Base Ball Park has been re-added, and presents, he avers, a field unexcelled by any in the country devoted to the purpose, while the nines of the Lone Star, R. E. Lee, Excelsior and Crescent clubs, have been so strengthened that he does not believe it possible for any amateur club, north or west, to defeat them. The scores of the Star-Lee game (a report of which appears in this issue), 5 to 2, the Excelsior-Lee games, 9 to 9 and 4 to 6, the Excelsior-Star games, 3 to 6, 5 to 9, and 5 to 4, show how evenly matched are these clubs, while the enthusiasm exhibited by the admirers of the "noble game" is evidenced by the numbers that gather to witness the weekly contests. He is persuaded that any two first class professional clubs visiting the Crescent City would find foemen worthy of their prowess, and secure, if they play eight consecutive days, an average attendance of two thousand spectators. On April 28th the Excelsiors and Crescents played a game at the Louisiana State Fair for a prize offered by the association, the former winning by a score of 13 to 8.

CLUB ELECTIONS.—The following officers were chosen at a meeting of the Aurora Club, of Chelsea, Mass., held on the 2d inst.:—President, Walter Whittlesey; vice-president, Chas. J. Foye; secretary, J. A. Nutter; treasurer, Geo. H. Moses; captain, Chas. J. Foye.....The Star Club, of Mt. Pleasant Military Academy, Sing Sing, N. Y., is officered thus:—President, L. L. Martens; secretary, E. S. Minor; treasurer, A. E. Bonafield; captain, F. Glli. Challenges from junior clubs should be addressed to E. S. Minor, Mt. Pleasant Academy, Sing Sing, N. Y.....The Empire Club, of Detroit, Mich., elected officers on April 29th, as follows:—President, J. Grensel; vice-president, John Hess; secretary, Harry Spence; treasurer, Richard Shearan; directors—Grensel, D. Lane, D. Collins, L. Ebner and J. Hess. They claim the championship of the state, and invite all clubs to meet them; letters to be addressed to S. Grensel, 101 Baker street, Detroit.....The officers of the Atlantic Club, of Cranston, R. I., are:—President, James Butler; vice-president, Henry Monroe; recording secretary, Robt. Eaton; corresponding secretary, Michael Bell; treasurer, G. Paine.

THE TROY CLUB TOUR.—The Troy nine have arranged the following tour:—May 6th, Atlantics, at Brooklyn; 7th, Eckfords, at Brooklyn; 8th, Nationals, at Washington; 9th, Olympics, at Washington; 10th, rest at Washington; 11th, Baltimore, at Baltimore; 12th, Sunday, rest at Philadelphia; 13th, Athletics, at Philadelphia; 14th, rest at New York; 15th, Mutuals, at New York; 16th, Mansfields, at Middletown; 17th, rest at Boston; 18th, Boston, at Boston, and 19th, home.

THE NEW CHICAGO NINE.—The Ætna nine, of Chicago, has been re organized with the following players:—Quinn, catcher; Lex, pitcher; Hallinan, short stop; Stambaugh, first base; Duffy, second base and captain; Reid, third base; Foley, left field; Ward, centre field, and Boardman, right field. This is not a strong team.

THE GAME OF CHESS.

To Correspondents.

WM. H. HOUGHKISS.—A translation of the last Ed. of the "Leitfaden" would, indeed, be a work of first rate interest and value; but we much doubt if a publisher could be found to risk the outlay.

H. A. CRAFE.—Thank you for the information; used with pleasure.

A. S. HUGGINS.—Don't be discouraged; many a failure as bad has been scored against more pretentious men. Thank you very heartily for the valuable chess slip.

F. W. MARTINDALE.—Please put the revised Prob. on diagram and refer it to Mr. Carpenter. When he pronounces it all right, we will gladly publish it.

W. A. SHERMAN.—To hand, thank you—only, no more "Springers" for us.

AMATEUR, Lowell, MASS.—Black can, undoubtedly, mate within the legal 40 moves in the position you send; but your diagram does not show on what part of the files the pieces are. Please send your solution.

A READER, Troy, N. Y.—Thanks for the attention from your club; the little game shall have insertion, and further specimens would be welcomed.

A. Z. H.—Thank you for the emendation. "T.," in Herr Meyer's nomenclature, means a Rook. We shall soon have to publish a chess glossary to be able to read the different editors, even in English.

H. J. M.—Right on Herr Meyer's 5-move.

THE SAVANNAH TOURNEY ended by the victory of Mr. W. Grayton Mann. We have a little game from this vigorous club.

H. H. GUZELINE.—Please send solutions with future positions.

A. J. B.—There are several who claim to be champions. Our opinion is that the player who is willing and anxious to play to decide the question is entitled to the honor if he offers to contend with any other aspirant are declined, or not noticed. J. Brown Mackindoe, recently, through the CLIPPER, challenged to play a match with Henry Spayth, or any other player, for the championship, but up to this time no response has been made. Under the circumstances, therefore, Mr. Mackindoe has the best claim to the championship honors.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, May 6th, '72.

The only sensation produced in this city since our last was Horace Greeley's nomination for the Presidency, the news of which reached us on Friday, May 3d, immediately upon the receipt of which the boys got out the big cannon, and gave Horace one hundred for his nob. At various theatres the burlesquers and variety people got off innocent little bits of pleasantry in reference to the farmer's nomination, all of which were kindly received by "discriminating audiences," if you know what that means.....May 1st, our moving day, has come and gone, for the which we should all be extremely thankful. *No*body likes moving, yet if everybody didn't move something or somewhere, it wouldn't seem like New York. The good old soul we board with, Mrs. Janeway, always moves, and always dumps her boarders down in some outlandish hole which it takes them about one year to get accustomed to, and then up she jumps, and squats down somewhere else, every year fetching up in a worse den than the one just vacated. Why we all stand it none of us can tell. We have been sold out a dozen times, too, by this veteran housekeeper, but we make it so warm for the purchasers that they are glad to sell us back to Mrs. Janeway at a heavy loss on the investment. Moving plays hob with places of amusement, too, and managers despise the day as they do poison. Some of them, with a good deal of dogged sagacity, permit their people to take benefits during moving week, which is a good point for the managers, but a losing game for the people supposed to be benefitted.....Actresses must be on the down grade in London, where a shopkeeper advertises them as "reduced to two and six pence a dozen." This reckless brigand ought to be clubbed for attempting to reduce the fare.....Somebody will lose on New England's champion fat man if they don't get him off their hands soon. Two years ago this "first heavies" weighed 448 pounds. Now he barely turns the beam at 402 in his stocking feet. There is a screw loose, somewhere. "Our Jim" thinks he is training "to be a living skeleton, hoom gits better wages than fat parties," but we attach little weight to Jim's opinions.....The opera people have much to answer for; every now and then they combine to assail the public with some piece of music that is caught up and sung and whistled and played by all the discordant elements to be found in great cities. We are willing to be tortured by these devilish "birds of song," but a little of it will go a great ways. The "soul of musicshed" by the operatic conspiracy is killing us by inches; they need to have with the "Sword of the Father," then the "Gendarmes" slashed away at us; and, of late, we are almost worried to death by the villainous "Trovatore." We'll make rhymes about this diabolical contraption:—

O, LET US UP ON TROVATORE!

When morning, with its rosate beams,
First through the half closed shutters gleams,
What is it breaks our early dreams?
—'Tis Trovatore!

Confound the bore! our flesh doth creep,
On organ grinders oaths we heap;
He's roused us from our second sleep
—With Trovatore!

When o'er our office desk we bend,
Inditing letters to a friend,
What sound the list'ning air doth rend!
—'Tis Trovatore!

Or, printer's devil copy waits,
When on the sanctum's floor it grates
That hideous sound; by all the fates
—'Tis Trovatore!

If we to evening party go,
There's that bare-shouldered girl, you know,
Who bangs that old piano so
—With Trovatore!

And if to the Academy
We bend our steps we're sure to see
That name upon the bills, and flee,
—'Tis Trovatore!

Poor Troubadour! if thus to trill
Familiar nonsense makes you "ill,"
How sadder these whose nerves you kill
—With Trovatore!

.....A young man writes to know "whether, in view of the coming jubilee in Boston, he could get an engagement to play the bones." We don't know, but our opinion is that if there are any bones to pick in that great aggregation of sound and fury, Mr. Gilmore will do the picking himself.....We get some of the most outlandish questions you ever heard of. Another lunatic asks if Mr. Forrest ever played "Norma." And a swamp fiend sent us a package of manuscript last Friday, which he wished us to read at once, and let him know our opinion of it. It's a tragedy, in five acts, and four hundred folios. We got Jim to run his eye over it, and here is what that youth says about it:—

"The Fuss or Burn."—This is a nu pla, bi a person hoos name is Wirjun Blodjit. It's the most damdest trash I ever red for a nu pla, and for that reazn I think the thing wood take if brort on enter our bords, with plenty of scops and lashy gurls to make a sho in the murder seans. The wurds seant bad for a grene rifer, and the actirs is nersly or slane before the poleese git to the spot, which is rale fun. Wat is Wirjun Blodjit's perfeshun? Bil Blodjit is wolthy, and his pay a manijer five hundred dollars a mth. I bleve he kin git his "Fuss or Blud" prodooced in the metropolis, and in that we sekure a good send ort for the provinces. If Blodjit is poor, he'd best "sit him tu a manijerly" with his beesty pla. This is a tru bil.

.....They have got a new singer at Tony Pastor's; Orville Pitcher is his name; our readers will please understand that he is no base, bawl Pitcher.....Somewhere up Broadway something is on exhibition which the man that keeps the place calls "a woman in likeness to a bear." This is nothing new, as bore women can be seen at nearly every theatre now-a-days.....Some folks have odd ideas about curiosities. In Duluth they have on exhibition a corset which killed three women. They merely exhibit this corset be-cause it pays.....What do you think of this? Wallack's Theatre announces that, on Thursday evening, May 9th, "a lady will make her first appearance on any stage." This is outrageous and a libel on the profession. We have seen thousands of ladies upon the stage. Oh, fie, Mr. Wallack, fie; what will the fair sex think of you?.....They are getting up some rip-staving musical instruments for the Boston Jubilee. We have just learned, on the most reliable authority, that some enthusiastic gentleman is now engaged in making a thirty foot long log into a fife to be used at the Coliseum. He is puzzled how, however, about a fifer. Let him possess his soul in peace—get George Francis Train. The fife and the fifer combined will make a bigger blow than that which tore down the jubilees building the other day.....Ole Bull, the fiddler, contemplates a return to Europe; but, unlike the many musical celebrities who have preceded him by steamer, he prefers making his way over on the bridge.....A wide awake Ohio editor disheads Miss Kellogg against the assaults of a fellow journalist, who very indelicately, we think, asserted that the lady "had a larger repertoire than any other living prima donna." This Ohio man says he doesn't know how she dressed in other cities, but in his town "her repertoire did not seem to extend out so far as either Nilsson's or Patti's." For our part we do not think ladies' repertoires are proper subjects for newspaper discussion, at all; yet we certainly can find no fault with the Ohio journalist for his defence of Miss Kellogg against the outrageous insinuations of the other chap. It is no wonder that charges of immorality are made against the stage when journalists can be found so base and void of all shame as to admit into their columns statements and disputes about such private matters as ladies' repertoires. "To the pure all things are pure," may do very well in theory, but it is another matter altogether when put into practice. We hope we have heard the last of this disgraceful discussion between editors-calling themselves gentlemen. And while on this subject, permit us to give you the true version of

THE DOLLY VARDEN "REPERTOIRE."

In time of old,
As we are told,
When maids were helps in earnest,
And "crushers" they
'D not come in play,
The girls with tubs were famished;
And, that the suds
Might not spoil duds,
When o'er the wash tub leaning,
Would tuck their frocks
Upon their backs,
To save their garments' meaning.
And here each nymph
Affects a limp,
And dresses like a puppet,
Pulls up her clothes
And follows those
She once her nose turned up at.
Upon her back
A coal sack—
P faith, she looks a hard 'un!
And 'on the name
Our damsels claim,
And call it Dolly Vardon.

City Summary.

THE SEASON CLOSED at the Grand Opera House with the performances of Friday evening, May 3d, "Lalla Rookh" having been the main attraction during the closing nights. The attendance was meagre, notwithstanding extra exertions were made by several individuals receiving benefits to increase it. On Wednesday evening the benefit of the ushers occurred. On Thursday evening the joint benefit of James W. Morrisey, treasurer, and Joseph H. Tooker, business manager, took place, when, in addition to "Lalla Rookh," and between the second and third acts thereof, an operatic concert was given, with the following artists:—Mlle Clara Perl, prima donna contralto; Mlle Anna Eizer, soprano; Mlle Adelaide Manzocchi, pianist; R. H. Stratford, harpist, and Prof. R. Mulder, musical conductor. On Friday evening the Misses Edith Challis and Emma Cline received a joint benefit, when "Lalla Rookh" was performed, for the last time, at this theatre. No performance was given on Saturday on account of transferring the scenery, costumes, properties, etc., to Niblo's Garden. On Sunday evening, the last concert of the season was given, the Ninth Regiment band and Herr Richard, the recently arrived German tenor, being the attraction. We append a summary of the business of the season:—

The season of Opera, which commenced on Saturday evening, Sept. 25, 1871. As it was conducted upon what is called the jobbing system, the changes in the company will be noticed as they occurred. The following is a list of the managers, officers, and the principal artists who appeared:—Business Manager, Cole, manager; Thomas E. Morris, business manager; H. Thomas, leader of orchestra; G. W. Dayton, scenic artist; E. Wallis, machinist and property; J. L. Simpson, calcium lights; J. Thorne, head usher; Max, Hall, Harry Hyman, Wm. Harris, T. J. Hind, W. H. Pope, C. T. Parsloe, J. S. Bruton, George Johnson, J. McEvoy, D. Barclay, J. Jones, the Misses Meredith Osborne, Edith Challis, Emma Cline, Marie Price, Frances Jackson, and Ida Jackson, the opening night Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Bandmann commenced a star engagement, acting in "Narcisse" and "A Happy Pair." On the 4th Prescott's dramatic company, from the Bowery Theatre, appeared during the week, at the end of which Mark Smith and Harry Sydney withdrew from the company. On the 11th "Narcisse" was revived and acted during that week, except on Thursday, the 14th, when the "Marble Heart" was produced for the benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Bandmann, and on which occasion only Mr. Theodore Hamilton appeared as Damasio. Mr. and Mrs. Bandmann closed their engagement on the 18th, and were followed by Carl Pfeiffer, who made his début on the dramatic stage on the 19th, in a sensational play entitled "Gotty Geoff," which ran until Sept. 30th. On the 18th, J. B. Studley, Miss Ione Burke and Mme Fouisi made their first appearances, and remained during the run of "Gotty Geoff." Miss Kate Meagher, scenic artist, was engaged.

October—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence commenced a star engagement on the 2d, in "Pluck on Pluck," which was then produced for the first time in America, and in which the following star appearances were made:—George Clarke, J. F. Hagan, T. Waddleton, A. G. Enos, S. B. Duffield and Miss Rose Eytinge. Miss Rose Coyte continued. This drama ran until Nov. 11th inclusive. On the 23d a matinée performance was given for the benefit of the sufferers by the Chicago, Ill., conflagration, at which representatives from all the theatres, variety and minstrel halls, performed.

November 20th, the "Forest Rangers Mail" was produced, and acted during that week, at the close of which Miss Ione Burke and T. J. Hind withdrew from the company. On the 27th, "Paris; or, The Days of the Commune," was acted for the first time on any scenic stage in this city, Mr. and Mrs. Florence and W. J. Whalley were added to the company. The drama ran but one week and proved a failure.

December 4th, Frank Mayo commenced an engagement in the "Three Guardsmen," having made his first appearance at her first appearance. It gave place on the 9th to the "Streets of New York," which ran until the 16th, inclusive. T. E. Morris seceded from the business management and Joseph H. Tooker succeeded him. On the 18th, "Lalla Rookh" was performed by the Stock company, A. H. Davenport being added thereto; it ran during that week. On the 25th, at a matinée performance, Herr Theodor Wachtel, supported by a German operatic company, appeared in "Faust and Marguerite," and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. J. Florence commenced a star engagement, opening in the "Trick of Leave Man," which ran during the week, the only changes in the cast being Edwin Forrest vice T. J. Hind, and Miss Edith Challis in the Miss Jones Role.

January 1st—The "Colleen Bawn" was produced, George Becks being added to the company, and it ran throughout that week. On the 8th the theatre was closed, out of respect to the memory of the late Col. James Fisk, Jr., who was murdered on the 6th. On the 9th "Ulmine," a dramatization of "No Thoroughfare," was produced, in which the Misses Lizzie Price and Emma Thorne made their first appearance. "Lalla Rookh" was rendered for the benefit of the ushers on the 13th, when the dramatic season was closed. On the 22d a circus company, under the management of Messrs. Avery Smith, J. J. Nathans and D. June, commenced a season. W. Waterman was the equestrian director; Lew Lord, ringmaster; Jennie Lord, musical director. The company included the following:—Young Romeo, Charles Conrad, Lasalle and Millon, Philo Nathans, John Henry and Harry Welby; Cooke, Senor Marquesse, Sebastian and Emily Lasalle; Master Willie Wood and Charley Arnour, with a trained pony, "Black Prince," and a trick horse, "Canary." On the 24th J. Lewis Baker seceded from the management. The circus company performed every afternoon and evening until the 29th, when it closed, with the exception of the latter, the last on which a circus performance of Smith, Nathans & Co. was given, they retiring to private life.

February 5th, an operatic season was commenced by the Mulder-Habelt German Opera Company, the principal artists being Ines Fabbri, Anna Bissett, Anna Eizer, Jacob Muller, Carl Formes, Carl Bernard, with Prof. R. Mulder, musical director. They continued until the 17th inclusive, when the theatre closed and remained so until March 18th.

March 18th.—The theatre was re-opened for a dress rehearsal of the spectacular drama entitled "Lalla Rookh," which was produced for the first time on the 19th, with the following company:—J. B. Studley, George Becks, J. R. Healy, T. E. Morris, M. W. Blake, Mark Bates, Richard E. Roberts, George Johnson, F. T. Rainey, Charles Burke, G. Wells, R. Ellis, R. M. Duffield, E. Thompson, C. Seager, T. Hamilton, Miss Ione Burke, Edith Challis, Susan Galton, Emma Cline and Miss Myers, the premieres of the ballet were Miles de Rosa, Albertina, Manzeri and Lussardi.

April 1st.—The Misses Emma Cline and Susan Galton exchanged characters.

May 2d.—Season closed, "Lalla Rookh" continuing the attraction to the end. During the season a number of concerts were given on Sunday evenings, for which the 9th Regiment band and prominent musical artists, specially engaged, constituted the attraction.

THE ANNUAL MIGRATION from one part of this city to another, which is usually indulged in by many of our inhabitants about the 1st of May, commenced at the season of flowers, has the tendency to deplete the attendance in a considerable degree at our places of amusement. Those theatres which have presented strong attractions may be said to have been the least affected, and among such we may class the Fifth Avenue, Wallack's, and the Olympic.

IN "ARTICLE 47," at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, the artists have all become thoroughly identified with their respective characters, and are familiar with the dialogue spoken by those with whom they are associated, that their acting has improved in naturalness and ease, as their attention is not necessarily diverted in the slightest degree from their own labors. This is one great advantage which accrues, not only to artists, but their auditors, in running pieces.

J. H. LAING, business agent, having closed his season's tour, arrived in the city during the past week.

SAMUEL COLVILLE, the business manager of the Lydia Thompson burlesque troupe, was in the city during the past week, on a flying visit, to transact some business relative to the appearance of that troupe. They will not appear at Wallack's early in June, as has been stated, but about the middle or latter part of July.

NO CHANGE occurred in the performances at the Olympic Theatre during the past week, the perennial spectacular pantomime of "Humpty Dumpty," with its varied incidental attractions, gorgeous costumes, bright sceneries, graceful ballets and artistic marble tableau continuing the attraction.

IT IS PROBABLE that the Olympic Theatre will, next season, be converted into a variety theatre. Negotiations are now pending between Mr. John Duff and a gentleman of means, who has for some time been interested in a well known variety theatre as a silent partner, for the transfer to the latter of that property on a long lease.

"LONDON ASSURANCE" was continued during the past week at Wallack's, a matinee having been given on May 4th.

"BLACK FRIDAY" was withdrawn from the boards of Niblo's Garden after the performances of May 4th, and this evening the spectacle of "Lalla Rookh" will be presented for the first time at that theatre. On Friday evening the performances were set apart for the benefit of the attaches of the theatre, and so successful had been their efforts in disposing of tickets that the auditorium was filled in every part, and there were a large number of persons occupying standing room.

MCEVOY'S HIBERNICON attracted good-sized audiences at the St. James Theatre during the week just closed. W. F. Lawton's new songs and stories related by the character of Barney the guide, are prominent features of the entertainment, and are deserving of commendation.

LOTTA and her mother are to sail for Europe the latter part of the present month, and expect to remain abroad some fifteen months.

FRANZ LEY, Germany's greatest song writer, arrived in this city on Saturday, May 4th. He was welcomed, ere the steamer landed, by the principal members of the Liederkranz Society, who went down the harbor to meet him. After the steamer landed at Hoboken, a reception was held at Busch's Hotel, after which the party left for the Belvidere House, in this city. In the afternoon he attended the festival given by Messrs. Steinway & Sons, and in the evening the Philharmonic concert. He left the city this morning, May 6th, for Baltimore, Md., where he is to remain some days.

MLLE. PUBNIA SARI, danseuse; her husband, Antonio Sassi; Rosina Pagani, danseuse; Adolph Neuendorf, late conductor of the Parepa-Rosa opera troupe, and co-manager with Carl Rosa during the German and Italian seasons; Hughey Dougherty, Ethiopian comedian; G. W. Moore, one of the managers of the Christy minstrels, playing at St. James Hall, London, Eng.; and Messrs. Jamet and Barre, of the Nilsson opera troupe, were passengers for Europe by the Saturday's steamer of May 4th.

THE "WORKING GIRL OF NEW YORK," a dramatic sketch in some six scenes, was the chief novelty at the Theatre Comique during the past week. John Hart, in the character of Dick Mauley, created much merriment, and received very good support from the principal members of the stock company. The programme concluded with the burlesque entitled the "Field of the Cloth of Gold," in which the Misses Sophie and Irene Worrell acted the chief characters. This evening a burlesque, entitled "Blue Monday," is to be acted for the first time, in which Josh Hart will appear in living pictures. There will be a representation of the Ninth Regiment marching down Broadway, headed by a brass band and the Colonel mounted on horseback.

THE ENCAMPMENT FRATERNELLE OASIS OF ELKS, on April 27th, celebrated with appropriate ceremonies the occupation of the new rooms at No. 604 Broadway. Charles W. Brooke, Esq., occupied the chair, and during the evening, in a pleasing address, presented Mr. H. P. O'Neil, the chief officer of the order, with a valuable gold medal on behalf of the lodge. Vocal and instrumental music was furnished by Tony Pastor, Frank Dobson, Hen. Mason, Jerry Barrington, George Yeoman and G. W. Rockefeller. An Irish poem was recited by Charles W. Brooke, Esq., and "Ooddy Goodt" recited "Schneider's Ride." Later in the evening a substantial banquet was served, of which a large number of ladies and gentlemen partook.

LISA WEBER and W. S. Mullaly will leave for Europe after the Boston Peace Jubilee, where Mr. Mullaly is engaged as leader of Gilmore's band, and return here about the end of September. Managers desiring to secure Miss Weber for the fall, when she will be prepared to produce new burlesques, can address as per advertisement.

NIBLO'S GARDEN DESTROYED BY FIRE.—Another disastrous conflagration has swept away one of the finest and most popular temples of the drama in America. For the second time has Niblo's Garden, in this city, fallen a prey to the ravages of the insatiable fire fiend, and, as we write, a smouldering mass of ruins, black and smoking, marks the spot where, a few hours ago, stood this beautiful structure. Shortly after half-past seven o'clock on the morning of Monday, May 6th, Captain Yule, of the Sanitary Squad, while walking down Crosby street, observed smoke ascending from the dome of the theatre, and caused an alarm to be given. The Fire Department were quick to respond, and went to work with their accustomed energy to conquer the flames, which were first discovered in the centre of the dome, from whence they rapidly spread to the stage, eating away the flies. Communicating with the inflammable material collected there, they increased in violence and not only baffled the almost superhuman attempts of the firemen to arrest their career, but compelled them to retreat from the interior of the building, in doing which several were so overcome by the dense volume of smoke and the intense heat that they were with difficulty rescued, and for some time did not recover. Captain Clinchy, who was upon the stage, with others, was severely injured in one of his arms by an explosion of gas. The entire fire department were summoned to the scene, and exerted themselves to the utmost, but without avail, as far as the theatre was concerned, though they managed to save the Metropolitan Hotel, in which it was located, from destruction. In a little over two hours nothing remained of the theatre but the rear walls, on Crosby street, towering sadly over the steaming heap of debris. It is estimated that the loss sustained by the burning of the edifice, with its vast store of valuable properties, scenery, wardrobe, etc., will fall but little short of $400,000. Messrs. Jarrett and Palmer suffer a loss of over $150,000, while the Messrs. Coffin and Joseph C. Foster, owners of the scenery, costumes and properties of "Lalla Rookh"—which spectacle was to have been produced on the evening of the 6th—lose about $30,000. Chas. H. Morton, stage manager, lost $800 worth of wardrobe, in addition to valuable papers, and other members of the company suffer to various amounts. The building was owned by Mr. A. T. Stewart, and was valued at $50,000. The actual origin of the fire had not been discovered up to the time of our going to press. Some attributed it to accident, while others are disposed to believe it the work of an incendiary. An investigation by the Fire Marshal will probably throw light upon the subject. The theatre, Mr. Stewart assured Mr. Jarrett, will be immediately rebuilt in a style of unsurpassed magnificence, and will be ready for opening by the 1st of September. A card was published in the evening papers, over the signatures of Messrs. Jarrett, Palmer and Cole, announcing that they will be transferred the company at the Grand Opera House on the 8th. The management of the Olympic Theatre, Theatre Comique and other places of amusement also tendered the use of their establishments for a similar purpose. Underneath we present a history of the theatre and its business from the period of its first opening:—

HISTORY OF NIBLO'S.

Niblo's Garden was the twenty-first place of amusement opened in this city. Until the year 1826 the land upon which the theatre now stands was a swamp, which was then used as a training ground for race-horses. William Niblo took a lease of it, and resolved to convert it into a garden for the public. Large trees, brought from distant woods, were planted; choice exotics, from the hot-houses of Europe, were placed in conservatories there their spray into the air, and in the centre of this beautiful place a neat theatre was erected and dedicated to muse. The first entertainments therein given consisted of feats of horsemanship and dramas, and on May 28th, 1828, the Bowery Theatre burned down, and Mr. Niblo resolved to build a theatre, and in fifteen days from the time the foundation was laid a handsome and commodious structure was completed. It comprised seclous stage, a parquet, and two circles of boxes, capable of holding 1,200 persons. It was called the Sans Souci. On the 18th of May, 1829, it was converted into a concert saloon. Soon after Mr. Niblo erected a larger and more complete theatre, in which concerts and the performances of the Ravel Family were given year after year. During the summer of 1837 a vaudeville company was formed, under the direction of Joseph Jefferson and Mr. Blake, which played in the evening in a number of musical farces in a very neat and attractive manner. Among that company were J. Jefferson, Mr. Thayer, Mr. Thomas, C. Lewellin, Mr. Palmer, T. Johnson, Mr. Morris, Mr. Sefton, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Knight, Mrs. Madeo and Miss Maxine Fisher. During that season J. W. Wallack, jr., appeared, and Sept. 15th, Miss De Bar—afterwards Mrs. J. R. Scott—made her first appearance on the stage. On the occasion of Mrs. Knight's benefit, playing Rose in "John of Paris." The season closed on Sept. 23d, with a benefit to Gabriel Ravel. It was re-opened in the spring of 1838 with concerts, under the direction of Mr. Watkins. Miss Fisher was engaged as prima donna. Under the management of John Sefton. The Ravel Family distributed their performances with the dramatic company. The season ended Sept. 15th. It was re-opened June 18th, 1839, with concerts by Mr. and Mrs. Sefton, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. H. Horn (formerly Miss Horton), Mr. T. Bishop and Mr. Maynard as principals. These concerts were alternated with the performances of the Ravel Family. The dramatic season commenced June 25th, with the last Mr. Burton at the head of the company. On July 4th he produced his pantomime of the "Ocean Monster" for the first time. The dramatic season closed Sept. 18th, and the Ravels continued their performances somewhat later in the month. On September 30th, 1839, Mr. Burton opened an engagement with Miss Clarke under the management of John Sefton. The Ravel Family distributed their performances with the dramatic company. The season ended Sept. 15th, when it was re-opened June 15th, 1840, concerts by Mr. and Mrs. Sefton by Mr. and Mrs. Worrington. The balance of the evening was filled up with a variety entertainment, which was very good, and the whole closed with the farce of "Box and Cox." Last evening the same bill was repeated, and "Box and Cox" was presented. This evening, the farces of "Everybody's Friend" and "Odd Things" will be given. "Everybody's Friend" and "Odd Things" will be played every night here for the rest of the week, and are billed for Wilmington, N. C., May 6th, and Norfolk, Va., 7th; Richmond, Va., 8th, 9th and 10th.

PERU, ILL., April 29th, 1872.—Our correspondent, writing on May 4th, sends in the following report of amusements:—"The benefit of E. G. McCall at the Trimble Opera House was quite a success. The bill consisted of the 'Streets of New York,' dramatic readings by Mrs. Margaretta B. Mowatt, and the farce of the 'Two Convicts.' On Tuesday evening Lester Wallack's 'Veteran' was produced by a company from New York. The play is well acted, but nevertheless it failed to draw, the attendance being very poor all the week.....At the Capitol Theatre 'Bertha' was been the attraction, with Miss Belle Bailey in the title role. She has been ably supported by manager Keeble as Philip Hamilton, Charles Waverley as Jack Ryerse, Wm. Scallan as Dick Rivers, Fred Scallan as Joe Bigwater, Miss Charlene Weidman as Lizette Graham and Miss Annie Mack as Hester Smith. 'Buffalo Bill' will be the attraction at this house next (this) week."

MR. A. D. HOLMAN, of the Holman Opera Troupe, and Miss Blanche Bradshaw, formerly connected with the same troupe, but now of the Academy of Music, Chicago, were married in Toronto, Ont., on the 17th of April.

MR. AND MRS. F. M. HAYES acted during the past week at Salt Lake City, Utah. The theatre is now under the management of H. B. Clawson and J. C. Graham, and the principal members of the company are:—H. B. Marden, J. C. Graham, A. Tourne, Miss A. Adams, and Miss Alice Clawson.

MRS. T. J. HERNDON, of the Herndon dramatic company, received a complimentary benefit at Ogdensburgh, N. Y., May 3d.

DANIEL E. HANDMANN, supported by Selden Irwin's dramatic company, acted during the past week at Milwaukee, Wis.

DAVIS & CO., theatrical agents, Cincinnati, O., whose address is in another column, want several dramatic and variety artists, to whom they will give engagements at once.

J. NEWTON GOTTHOLD, supported by the Pittsburgh, Pa., opera house company, played "Buffalo Bill" at Titusville, Pa., May 3d, to a good house, and Parker's Landing, May 4th.

THE DRAMATIC STARS in Boston, Mass., is pencographed as follows by our correspondent, under date of May 4th:—"Joe Murphy opened at the St. James on Monday last in 'Help,' of which notices have frequently appeared in the CLIPPER. Annie Lawrence made her first appearance at this theatre, and played Fanny Smart perdy and prettily. Emie Warren was also a new comer, and her Little Waldro was quite effective. Altogether the play and the cast deserves a larger house than it drew the night we were present. Murphy stays until Friday next, and then Aimee and her troupe re-appear in 'Les Brigands.'.....Maggie Mitchell made her first appearance in Boston in five years on Monday, April 29th, playing the old familiar role of Pauchon all the week to excellent houses. She is the same bright, pretty, plucky creature, and still retains her complete sway over her audience. The scenery was appropriate, and the entertainment a success. On Monday, May 6th, 'Jane Eyre' will be brought out for the first time in Boston, and on the week following Joe Jefferson appears in 'Rip Van Winkle.'.....At the Museum a new version of 'Aurora Floyd,' done especially for this house by A. W. Young, is produced for the first time on any stage on Monday evening, April 30th, and although considerable pains had been taken in its preparation, and the acting was powerful, it failed to hit the popular taste, and is to be withdrawn after the matinee to-day. Last night Frank Hardenburgh had a benefit, offering as an attraction Shakespeare's 'Richard III,' appearing for the first time as the Duke of Gloster. To-night 'Ruy Blas' is to be repeated, Chas. Barron and Annie Clarke appearing in the leading roles, followed by the 'Clockmaker's Hat,' while William Warren and a portion of the company go over to the Chelsea Academy of Music, presenting a capital bill in that cosy little theatre. On Monday, Tuesday and Friday of next (this) week, 'Partners for Life' and a 'Phenomenon in a Smock Frock' will be given; on Wednesday 'Babes in the Wood' and 'A Regular Fix;' and on Thursday, 'Mrs. Wardrop's Wanderers.' Oh Saturday, Warren takes a benefit, appearing in three of his best characters. On the 13th, Augustin Daly's 'Article 47' will be brought out for the first time in Boston.....At the Globe the Florences have drawn well for their last week, presenting 'The Colleen Bawn' at every performance. Mrs. Florence was amusing, but exaggerated as Anne Chute; her place, however, was taken after Tuesday by Mrs. Barry, who played the part delightfully. H. P. Daly, the original Hardress Cregan in this country, played the same part finely. W. E. Sheridan as Kyrle Daly was out of his element, but his efforts were praiseworthy. J. T. Raymond as Danny Mann was decidedly good, giving one of his best performances. Josie Orton as Eily O'Connor, and all the rest of the cast were good. The scenery was splendid, especially the cave scene in the second act. To-night, Tuesday, Mrs. Florence's farewell appearance, at his own benefit, and Mr. W. R. Floyd will appear for the first time in Boston as Danny Mann. Next (this) week a new play, entitled 'Forbidden Fruit,' will be brought out."

MARION TURCK'S STAR COMPANY played "Buffalo Bill" at Yonkers, N. Y., April 29th; Tarrytown, 30th; Sing Sing, May 1st, and "Ticket-of-Leave Man," 2d, and "Buffalo Bill" at Peekskill, 3d. An occasional correspondent, writing on May 3d, says:—"Turck played Buffalo Bill with spirit, and a large spice of western dash. His Hawkshaw evinced a good command of pathos and intensity. Miss Helen Temple as Lillie, in 'Buffalo Bill' created genuine enthusiasm, and was often warmly applauded. Her May Edwards was also rendered with repeated and earnest marks of popular favor. George C. Davenport as Snake Root Sam, and Miss Marion Flake as Kitty Muldoon, became favorites at once, and kept the house in a roar wherever on the scene. Mr. Davenport's Bob Brierly showed versatility on his part and proved that the power to extort tears may co-exist with a high order of comic talent. Frederic Munroe as Wild Bill, Miss Morgan as Old Vet, W. H. Ferris as Jake McKandless, and F. H. Dietz as Frank Stark, were all good. Miss Jennie Fisher was excellent. The Misses Leland and Vaughn added something besides beauty to their stage appearances. The company is billed ahead as follows:—Newburgh, May 6th and 7th; Fishkill, 8th and 9th, and Poughkeepsie, 10th and 11th."

LILLA FURBON, who is prepared to appear in the drama of "The Scarlet Cord," can be addressed as per advertisement.

AMY STONE'S DRAMATIC COMPANY will perform at Manchester, N. H., May 10th and 11th; Nashua, 13th and 14th; Clinton, Mass., 16th and 16th, and Leominster, 17th and 18th, at which latter place their season will close.

MESSRS. JEFFERSON, supported by a dramatic company under the management of Charles B. Jefferson, played "Rip Van Winkle" at Elliot's Academy of Music, Williamsport, Pa., April 26th and 30th; Wilkesbarre, May 1st and 2d, and Scranton, 3d and 4th, and is billed to perform at Newark, N. J., 6th and 7th.

MISS CLARA NORRIS and a dramatic company are to play "Niagara" at Newark, N. J., May 6th.

MR. J. RALPH recently played the part of Hotspur one night, Saturday, May 4th, when he acted Macbeth at Newark, N. J., supported by Mrs. Sefton as Lady Macbeth, Theodore Hamilton as Macduff, and a dramatic company.

SOLOMON ROSSON IN A NEW ROLE.—That popular comedian delivered a lecture on "Fish, Astronomy and Oysters," at the Varieties Theatre, New Orleans, La., on Sunday evening, April 28th. The preliminary announcements were quite humorous, from which we extract the following (imaginary) correspondence between the astron Alexander Von Humboldt and himself:—

HUMBOLDT AND ROSSON.—VAPOR VILLA, NOVEMBER April 31st, 1872.—MY GIFTED ROSSON.—On the occasion of your last Boston lecture you failed to explain whether the sagittyzinated prefection of crystallized phlegmatic sulphuret of zinc was in accordance with cryptogen of transcendale mineralogy. Am I to understand that you are to repair this omission at your lecture on Sunday next? By the kind wording of your note I infer that I have leave to bear on a subject on which we have the misfortune to differ!

Your friend, etc., A. VON HUMBOLDT.

VARIETIES THEATRE, April 32d, 1872.—MY DEAR HUM.—You do yourself and others an injustice when you say we differ on anything but minor details of sesquivinated predukeyses, you, on account of your inferior scientific attainments, may, at times, have been a little out of your reckoning, but I pray you, dear friend, touch no further of your knowledge of the geological oscillation of quorambulised vocosity in case of the focaltrastic zostatite of friendship such as ours must ever give way to any trifle, to the fact that I have, in my lecture, failed to give my views on the subject on the occasion of my Boston lecture was owing to causes beyond my prevention. On Sunday evening next, however, should the Varieties Theatre be favored with your presence, you will be fully enlightened on the subject. Your friend, etc., SOLOMON ROSSON.

The lecture was successful, the receipts being nearly $250.

AMUSEMENTS IN ST. LOUIS, MO., are thus reported by our correspondent, writing on March 3d:—"Ben de Bar appeared at his own theatre on April 29th, as Falstaff in 'Henry IV,' acting that character for the first time. On his first appearance he was received with a hearty ovation, and at the close of the third act. To-night, on the occasion of Florence's farewell appearance, at his own benefit, and Mr. W. R. Floyd will appear for the first time in Boston as Danny Mann. Next (this) week a new play, entitled 'Forbidden Fruit,' will be brought out."

MARION TURCK'S STAR COMPANY played "Buffalo Bill" at Yonkers, N. Y., April 29th; Tarrytown, 30th; Sing Sing, May 1st, and "Ticket-of-Leave Man," 2d, and "Buffalo Bill" at Peekskill, 3d. An occasional correspondent, writing on May 3d, says:—"Turck played Buffalo Bill with spirit, and a large spice of western dash. His Hawkshaw evinced a good command of pathos and intensity. Miss Helen Temple as Lillie, in 'Buffalo Bill' created genuine enthusiasm, and was often warmly applauded. Her May Edwards was also rendered with repeated and earnest marks of popular favor. George C. Davenport as Snake Root Sam, and Miss Marion Flake as Kitty Muldoon, became favorites at once, and kept the house in a roar wherever on the scene. Mr. Davenport's Bob Brierly showed versatility on his part and proved that the power to extort tears may co-exist with a high order of comic talent. Frederic Munroe as Wild Bill, Miss Morgan as Old Vet, W. H. Ferris as Jake McKandless, and F. H. Dietz as Frank Stark, were all good. Miss Jennie Fisher was excellent. The Misses Leland and Vaughn added something besides beauty to their stage appearances. The company is billed ahead as follows:—Newburgh, May 6th and 7th; Fishkill, 8th and 9th, and Poughkeepsie, 10th and 11th."

"THE BLACK CROOK" will be produced at the National Theatre, Washington, D. C., on May 6th, with Miss Kate Hastley as Stateliff, Miss Addie Boniface as Christine, and Hernandez Foster as Desperado. Miss Lupo will be premiere danseuse; Bates Manning, soubrette, and there are twelve coryphees and a corps of ballet girls, with complete the ballet. Mr. Saville promises that it will surpass any spectacular piece ever presented there.

THE HASE BALL MANIA, Bateman's Show, and the political excitement attendant upon affairs at Cincinnati, writes our correspondent, "interfered" "have interfered materially with the business of the different places of amusement in Baltimore the past week, our two regular theatres, among the rest, attracting but moderate audiences. Mr. and Mrs. Junius Brutus Booth opened at the Grand Opera House last Monday evening, April 29th, in 'Richard the Third,' and were supported by a stock of such strength as is seldom seen at this house. Mr. Booth is a persevering actor, and evidently a close Shakespearian scholar, but the correscations of histrionic genius which have dashed bewilderingly from other members of his illustrious family do not evince themselves for this action in more than fitful glimmerings. His facial setting, however, is good, and his acting in general is of such a nature as will undoubtedly please a not too critical audience. Mrs. Booth is really a very fine actress, possessing a queenly presence, and a voice clear and resonant as a bell. On Tuesday evening 'Romeo and Juliet' was presented; Wednesday, 'Hamlet;' Thursday, 'Othello;' last Friday, 'Much Ado About Nothing;' Saturday afternoon, 'Romeo and Juliet;' to-night, 'Richard III.' On Monday evening, May 6th, Mrs. Oates begins an engagement here.....Miss Kate Raymond commenced a week's engagement at the Holliday Street Theatre on Monday evening, in the 'Waifs of New York.' The less said about the merits of this play, the better for it. Miss Raymond personated Willie, the Waif, in a very spirited and pleasing manner. A monkey was quite a prominent feature of the play, and he performed his part as well as any other character in the piece. 'The Waifs of New York' was kept on through out the week. On Friday evening, for Miss Raymond's benefit, the 'French Spy' was played in addition, Mr. O. B. Collins acting Mohammed for this occasion. On Saturday evening, 'Jenny Lind' constituted the afterpiece. On Monday evening, May 6th, the Rand Sisters take a benefit, when the Ella Saven Sisters' is to be presented.....The benefit of Mr. Neil Warner is announced to take place at the Concordia Opera House May 6th. 'Othello' is to be the play, and Mrs. Addie Proctor Kunkel, Miss Grace Rawlinson, Mr. Bokee, and other talent of ability have volunteered."

THE OLD RELIABLES, under the management of Mr. J. G. Shultz, with Miss Helen D'Este as their star, opened at the Academy of Music, Petersburg, Va., on April 30th, in a new drama called "Heart Hungry." The plot of the piece is good, and, considering the short time (five days) in which it was dramatized by Miss D'Este, reflects credit on her. They played "The Lady of Lyons," "Fanchon" and "The Honeymoon" the remainder of the week to a fair business, and propose remaining the week.

THE ANDOVY PANORAMA troupe occupied the Opera House, Rochester, N. Y., during the past week, playing "The Three Hunchbacks," with G. W. Jester and Jerry Cohan in their specialties; they have done a large business. Charles Abbott was given a benefit on the 3d, which was a rouser. They closed on the 4th. On the 6th the Little Alberta Combination open for six nights.

MRS. JOHN WOOD, supported by the Boston Theatre company, appeared in the burlesque of "My Poll and Partner Joe" on the 2d inst., at Hartford, to a large audience.

THE UNION THEATRE COMPANY, under the management of Jones & Hanford, were announced for one entertainment at Harrisburg, Pa., May 6th. "Spirit of 1876; or, the Coming Woman" and the "Dead Shot," were announced.

AT THE PROVIDENCE, R. I., Opera House, on April 29th, for the benefit of her benefit, Miss Monk played "Fanchon," and received several floral offerings, among which was a beautiful boquet, in the centre of which was a silver vase enclosing $400 in greenbacks, a gift similar to that which Miss Cameron received at her benefit on April 30th. May 1st and 2d, "The Romance of a Poor Young Man" held the boards. On the 3d occurred Mr. Sheldon's benefit, when were played "Sweethearts and Wives" and "Spectre Bridegroom." All the acts were taken before the doors were opened. In answer to repeated calls, he came before the curtain several times, and between the plays made an appropriate speech. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was reproduced at the matinee on the 4th, and in the evening "Sweethearts and Wives" and "O'Neal the Great." "Ours" is announced for this week.

Musical.

THE BERGER FAMILY, Bell Ringers, and Sol Smith Russell, humorist, performed at Massillon, O., April 29th; Fort Wayne, Ind., 30th and May 1st; Logansport, 2d; Bloomington, Ill., 3d and 4th, and are billed ahead as follows:—Davenport, Iowa, 5th and 6th, and Council Bluffs, 7th and 8th. Miss Alexina Brands, a soprano vocalist, joined the company on May 1st. They open in San Francisco, Cal., May 13th.

HI. HENRI, cornettist, whose address find elsewhere, is prepared to accept summer engagements.

E. W. MOEHLER, bass and tuba player, advertises that he can be engaged.

A CONCERT TROUPE is wanted by M. Joannes, who advertises to give concerts at Green Bay, Wis., on May 30th.

THOS. PROSNO, leader of orchestra and brass bands, arranger and violinist, who can be addressed as per advertisement, wants an engagement.

MUSICIANS, including a clarionet player, are wanted by "Pluto," who can be addressed care of this office.

THE CHILD AMERICUS, the wonderful violin player, and a concert troupe from the east, commenced a season at Pacific Hall, San Francisco, April 29th.

MISS ANNA MEHLIG, pianist, is advertised to give a series of grand concerts in San Francisco. Time and place not yet announced.

OLE BULL and his concert troupe performed at Buffalo, N. Y., May 2d; Rochester, May 4th; and will be at Syracuse, 6th; Oneida, 7th; Utica, 8th; Rutland, Vt., 9th; Springfield, Mass., 10th; Waterbury, Conn., 11th, and Bridgeport 13th, inclosing the tour. Mr. Hall will sail for Norway the latter part of the present month.

A CORNET PLAYER and a violinist are advertised for in another column.

A BAND LEADER, who can play first violin and E flat cornet, is wanted by W. B. Cavanagh, whose address find elsewhere.

JOSEPH NOHLING, cornet, violin, flute and piccolo player, advertises that he can be engaged.

OPERA BOUFFE, with Aimee as the star, was the attraction at the National, Washington, D. C., during the past week, and attracted large and fashionable audiences.

"THE PEARL OF BAGDAD," a new comic opera—music by J. M. Loretz, Jr., libretto by Edwin F. De Nyse—was produced during the past week at the Brooklyn Theatre, to discriminating audiences, and proved a success, notwithstanding the attractions offered elsewhere. The plot turns upon an incident in the life of a beautiful slave, Zuleima, who, having fallen to Kasmin, a vine grower, in a game of chance, is seen and beloved by Samos, the son of the vizier, disguised as a Georgian. The latter tries to win her thereby love alone, but, finding her ambition excited by visions of a life in the vizier's harem, owing to the interference of Scarapoon, the Kadis officer, he buys her of Kadi, the vine grower's wife, as Scarapoon buys her of the husband. Zuleima regrets her coquettish treatment of Samos and renews her fidelity just as Scarapoon is about to punish Samos and convey her before the vizier, when Samos declares himself the son of the vizier, and all ends happily. The opera is a sort of companion piece to "Maritana," which, as a musical composition, it is thought to fully equal. The words are well suited to the music, being from the pen of Mr. De Nyse, business manager of the New York Olympic. Miss Howson, soprano, gave a most charming rendition of her part as Zuleima, singing the airs "Beauty Rare" and "I'll Look Pretty" in a manner to win an encore. John Clark, basso, and Eugene Clark, tenor, as Scarapoon and Samos, were very happy in pleasing, to the fullest extent, a most exacting audience. The humor of the former kept the house in a roar. Miss Treadway mezzo soprano, as Kedge Kasmin's jealous wife, and Mr. Dallon, baritone, as Kasmin, were up to all the requirements. "The Pearl of Bagdad" should be offered a chance on our New York boards, where an American opera is a novelty.

THE "DOUTON OF ALCANTARA" was performed by resident amateur talent at Newark, N. J., May 2d.

THE BERGER FAMILY, Swiss bell ringers, with Sol. Smith Russell, humorist, are now rapidly wending their way towards the Pacific slope, and will make their first appearance in San Francisco, Cal., on May 20th. The company is composed of excellent musicians, who, from an humble position, by the sheer force of industry and indomitable perseverance, have worked themselves up till they may now be considered one of the best musical troupes traveling. Their entertainment is of a refined nature, very pleasing, and appears to give satisfaction to all its patrons of whatever class of society. The dulcet sounds of the silver bells fall pleasantly upon the ear, while the eye is gratified with the great skill in manipulating these. Miss Anna Berger's performances upon the cornet are wonderful, the selections made for her solo performances being ever marked with taste. Miss Henrietta's staff bell solo is deserving of high praise, and seldom fails to evoke a triple encore. Besides playing upon the bells, the entire troupe play brass and string instruments, appearing during the evening as a string orchestra, also as a brass band. Sol Smith Russell, the humorist, has complete command of the muscles of his countenance, being able to change it at will to suit all occasions. His comic and character songs evince study, and the possession of artistic ability of no mean order, whilst in his performances there is never an indelicate allusion or gesture. His burlesque recitation of "Bingen on the Rhine" is alone well worth the price of admission. It is impossible in the space at our command to detail all the excellent features of this company, but we may add that some excellent vocalization by a soprano, and delightful harp music are certain to be heard. We doubt not that Californians, who are ever ready to recognize true merit, will accord them a gracious welcome.

MR. FRANK GILDER'S complimentary benefit on the 29th ult., in Philadelphia, was but slimly attended. Mr. Gilder was assisted by Messrs. Wm. Hamilton, Carl Formes, W. A. Briscoe, the Misses Pauline Hinsinger and Annie Boyd.

SIGNOR BRIGNOLI'S complimentary benefit, announced for the 2d inst. at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, was postponed until the 16th inst., when Signors Brignoli, Ferranti and Ronconi will appear in "Don Pasquale."

"MOSES IN EGYPT" was to be given in Music Hall, Boston, on May 9th at which Rosa De Krinz, Mrs. Chas. Lewis, Wm. and J. F. Wheelock, F. G. Packard and J. F. Rudolphsen would appear.....F. D. Sprague and F. G. Packard had a joint benefit on Friday, previous to their departure for Europe. Miss Cary's benefit occurs on Wednesday, the 8th inst.

HENRY C. FRAZEE, basso, late of the Holman Opera Troupe, was tendered a complimentary benefit at Music Hall, Toronto, Ont., on May 2d. He was assisted by Mr. Maloney, Miss Nora Hillary, Mr. Bowman, Mr. H Harray Scott, Mr. Hastly, and Mr. J. D. Kerrison.

BLIND TOM is announced to give a concert at Springfield, Ill., May 6th.

MR. LEE WILEY, cornetist of Prof. Spencer's Light Guard Band, Peoria Ill., has been secured for one of the corps of forty cornets to be present at the great Boston Jubilee.

A CONCERT in honor of Franz Abt, the eminent German composer, is announced to be given at the Concordia Opera House, Baltimore, on Friday evening, May 10th, under the auspices of the Germania Maennerchor, assisted by the Harmonie, Liederkranz and Arion societies. The programme is constituted solely of his compositions, and will be directed by him in person.

MR. JUSTUS S. WULFF, formerly leader of orchestra at the Metropolitan Theatre, Sandusky, Ill., was married in Peoria, Ill., on the evening of May 2d, to Miss Ella W. Burt, a very estimable young lady. Mr. Wulff has been engaged as leader of orchestra at the Athenæum, Rockford, Iowa, and assumed his position on Monday, the 6th inst.

A LEADER OF ORCHESTRA is wanted by Jas. McGirr and Co., who advertises.

Amateur.

AMATEURS desiring to join dramatic clubs are referred to A. L. Cooke's card in another column.

Variety Halls.

E. D. DAVIES, ventriloquist, commences an engagement at the National Theatre, Cincinnati, O., on May 13th.

THE SR. FELIX Parisian Infant Ballet Troupe, comprising four children, from five to eleven years of age, who do character and tableau ballets, can be engaged through their agent, Col. T. A. Brown.

ALLEN LEE FAVEN is said to have secured a lease of Maguire's Opera House, San Francisco, intending to convert it into a first class variety theatre.

E. M. CARROLL, Irish, Dutch and negro comedian, whose address is care of this office, can be secured for short or long engagements, with his boys—Little Dick, Eddie and Bennie—who do several special acts.

THE J. H. MILBURN COMBINATION perform for one week at Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, Nev., commencing May 6th. The performers are:—J. H. Milburn, Heywood, female impersonator and vocalist; Harry Stanwood, banjoist; the Reynolds Brothers, song and dance, and Miss L. Milburn, serio-comic.

CHARLEY ADAMS, Dutch song and dance man and comedian, closes his engagement of ten weeks at Broom's Opera House, Memphis, Tenn., on May 2d, and can be addressed care of the office.

FOUR OUT OF THE SIX NEW people advertised put in an appearance at the Detroit Theatre Comique on the 26th ult., appeared. Mlle. Sallie, dancesse; Frank Steele, cow-boiler, and Fenaly and Fitzgerald, song and dance. Mlle. Sallie is a fair dancer, not really a dansesse. Frank Steele manipulates on the cow-boiler exceedingly well, and Fenaly and Fitzgerald gave their songs and dances in first-class style. On the 3d, Maggie Nicholas and Jas. Gaynor made their debut, the former doing a very good slack-wire and plate-spinning act, and the latter in his comicalities was excellent. Bertha and Ida Fox are gaining more admirers every night, each being a star in her own act. Geo. Thatcher and Mlle. Lizette appear on Monday, the 6th, and Lew Spencer and Mlle. Henriette close the 4th and go to East Saginaw. Annie West is in town resting, and opens in Bay City the 6th. So wrote our correspondent on the 4th."

IN RICHMOND, VA., at the Academy of Music, no new attractions have been offered during the past week. Ada Freeman's songs and dances, and Annie Clare's jigs are the chief drawing mediums. Tim Morris, Joe Allen, Dan Howe and Miss De Berg, with those mentioned above, now constitute the entire company. The attendance remains about the same.

AT MONTAGUE'S PHILADELPHIA VARIETIES, last week, the new stars were Sappho, Miss Lelia Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Ellis and Mr. Sam Collins, who made their first appearance here on the 26th ult. Sappho and her sister, Miss Lelia, appeared to much advantage in their amusing cat duet and vocal specialties. The programme terminated with the extravaganza of "Prince Amabel," in which Sappho played the title role with a degree of intelligence surprising in one so young, and Miss Lelia Ellis made a graceful representation of Violet; Messrs. H. W. Ellis and Sam Collins gave admirable burlesque representations of their respective parts of Turko and Grumfangrimo, and the remaining parts were well filled. The Ethiopian comedian, Billy Barry, had a benefit here on the 2d inst., on which occasion the following appeared:—Robert Fox, Billy Carroll, George Miles and Miss Adams, and an immense audience testified to the popularity of the beneficiary. Miss Belle Celeste and Charles Matthews, trapeze performers, closed here on the 4th inst. This week, the extravaganza of "Endymion; or, the Naughty Boy who Cried for the Moon," will be produced by the Sappho Combination. On the 16th inst., Harry W. Williams, the stage manager, will have a benefit.

THE HENRI FAMILY, gymnasts, hat spinners and song and dance performers, at present at the Academy of Music, Nashville, Tenn., can be addressed care of this office.

CHARLEY MULORD states that he is traveling with Dan Rice's circus.

A CLARIONET PLAYER is wanted for Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw, Mich. See advertisement.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Galveston, Texas, during the week ending April 20th, the attendance was large. The comic singing of Miss Lottie's endeavors to please during her first engagement, presented her with a gold medal, on which was inscribed:—"Presented to Mlle Lottie Mitchell by Robt. Scales, Manager Academy of Music, Galveston, Texas, April 16th, 1872." During the week Lottie sang several new comic songs, which were received with great favor. Joe Taylor's banjo solos and songs also were received with marks of approbation. On Monday, May 6th, the present troupe will appear at the Perkins Theatre, in Houston, Texas, for a season of one week, during the state fair; after which they will return for a short season, and close with a benefit to Miss Lottie Mitchell. So wrote our correspondent on April 29th.

AT SHELLEY'S COMIQUE, Buffalo, N. Y., although but one new face appeared on April 29th, large audiences have congregated nightly. Comparatively few changes in the programme from the preceding week were introduced. The play of the "Dumb Man of Manchester," in which Miss Ada Jones, the new comer, took part; the interlude of "Military Tactics," and the farce of "Menagerie on the Brain," comprised the new features. Miss Jones also gave several ballads. Wednesday's matinee attracted a full house, comprising many ladies and children. Edwin Blanchard closed May 4th. The Bensons inaugurate their farewell week on the 6th. On that evening, Moran and Carney, juvenile, Irish and clog business, and Millie Lois, female gymnast, commence an engagement..... At Pitzgerald's Varieties, no changes have occurred since our last. Business is fair.

A DRUMMING MATCH between Major Wm. Nevans, of Chicago, Ill., and J. W. Watts, ex-Drum Major of the 11th U. S. Infantry, for the U. S. championship and $500, came off at Burlington Hall, Chicago, Ill., May 1st, before an audience of about five hundred. Major Nevans was declared the victor, and the performance at the Athenæum the past week showed a slight improvement, both in the attendance and the order of entertainment. Chas. Petrie, general comedian; Harry Bryant, ventriloquist, and Kitty Weldon, serio-comic vocalist, comprise the new faces. Geo. Thatcher and Mlle. Lizette closed on the 4th, opening in Detroit the 6th. Andy Collins and Bridgeport Mollie also closed on the 4th. Gussie Lamoreaux and John Buckley were announced for the 6th. Among the most pleasing features are the ballads of Maggie Fielding, terpsichorean efforts of Mlle. Lizette, the farce of "A Man Without a Head," in which the Fieldings are very funny, and last but not least, the ventriloquism by H. Bryant, who is nightly received with loud applause.

BROOM'S OPERA HOUSE, Memphis, Tenn., flourishes, and the large audiences that assemble give evidence of how much the patrons of the Opera House enjoy Manager Broom's performances. Stage manager Charles G. White seems to think that variety is the spice of life, and he never fails to arrange a programme to suit the tastes of everybody. The principal attractions are Walter Bray, song and dance man; and Ethiopian comedian; Charles Adams, Irish comedian; George Wild, champion song and dance and Ethiopian comedian; Charley White, interlocutor and American comedian; the Misses Fanny Duane and Helen Devere, vocalists; Maggie Loraine and Lizzie Warren, jiggists; Fanny Florence, dansese, and Chrissie Morrell, sensational vocalist..... The Olympic is doing well under the management of Billy Buchanan, who is now sole lessee and proprietor. Profs. Paul Schultz and Gaines are still the leading spirits of his orchestra. So wrote our correspondent on May 2d.

THE METROPOLITAN THEATRE, SPRINGFIELD, ILL., closed for the spring and summer season on April 30th. The house will be opened in September next. Fannie Keenan and Della Smith went to the Theatre Comique, Peoria, Ill.; Geo. White to Cincinnati, O., and Johnny Nichols and Le Belle Blanche to St. Louis.

AN EUREKA THEATRE COMIQUE, Wilkesbarre, Pa., the following performers constituted the attractions of the past week:—The Misses Flora and Jennie Weston, Nellie Cleveland, Belle Gaywood, Adelaide Nixon, Nellie Maskell, and Julia Barton, James Mack, Harry Kernell, Frank Wood, Zeonette and Revenl, and Neal Conway.

C. J. RYAN has purchased a half interest in the Tammany Hall Variety Theatre, Bay City, which, Billy Devere, comic singer, closed his engagement May 1st, upon which occasion he was tendered a benefit; he goes to Grand Rapids. Pensley and Fitzgerald, song and dance artists, and Miss Natty Howard, open May 13th.

AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, BROOKLYN, the Zig Zags—from the New York Olympic—are to be the feature this week, with a new pantomime and the Female Minstrels in new songs.

AT THE JEFFERSON VARIETIES we have the appended resume from our correspondent, dated May 3d:—"Samwells and his trained dogs and monkeys are adording the patrons of the Variety Theatre unlimited amusement this week. The quadrupeds do a large number of tricks with astonishing rapidity and precision. The dog clown, Grimaldi, is a canine wonder. Keegan and Clark, double clog and Dutch duets, are encored at the end of each act, on the whole, quite clever in their line of business. Candield and Booker's songs and dances met with decided favor, and numerous recalls are made upon these gentlemen every night. Billy Carter was re-engaged for one week longer and his negrotisms are now as attractive as a fortnight since. Miss Flora Benton, A. J. Talbott and Emma Miles constitute the attractions for specialties. A benefit concert occurred on the 30th ult. Entertainments were given at the Varieties Theatre and the Fifth Avenue Opera House. The same programme was presented at both houses by the same company, and, under the skilful direction of stage manager Fitzsimmons, everything worked with smoothness and regularity. The attendance at the two theatres was very large. A benefit to Mr. Samwells will occur on the 6th inst. During the progress of the performance at the Varieties Theatre a full and beautiful silver tea set was presented Mr. Aims by his Pittsburgh friends, as a tribute to his merit as a judicious and successful manager. And, by the way, Mr. Aims has been one of the most successful managers in the variety show line that has ever been in Pittsburgh. Harry Barton made the presentation speech, and stage manager Fitzsimmons replied on behalf of Mr. Aims. 'After the silver ware had been presented at the Varieties Theatre it was taken to the Fifth Avenue Opera House and exhibited to the audience from the stage, and generous applause. Prof. Samwells, with his trained dogs and monkeys, goes east after the 6th instant, and A. J. Talbott and Emma Miles go to Baltimore. Candield and Booker's engagement expires on the 4th inst. Those opening on the 6th inst. are Morton and Hughes, Ethiopian; Keegan and Clark, Irish comedian, and Mlle Irma, dancesse. Business during the week fairly large."

HARRY BLOODGOOD'S combination is to perform at Lawrence, Mass., May 7th.

TONY PASTOR and his traveling company are announced to commence their traveling tour at Providence, R. I., May 6th and go thence to Worcester, Mass., 7th; Springfield, 8th; Hartford, Conn., 9th; New Haven, 10th, and Bridgeport, 11th.

AT THE ASHLEY HOUSE, Rockak, Iowa, John Dunlap and Miss Maggie Willett, who were announced to open April 30th, did not do so until the 8th, in consequence of having missed the railroad connection. The departures of the past week were the Scottish sisters, Monte Deverney and Della Belle. The announcements for May 6th are Miss Mattie Bisgen and Charley Maigro.

MADAMES are referred to several press notices in another column, which speak favorably of Miss Hetty Treby's performances.

ALBERT GUERNEY, comic dancer, who can be engaged through his agents, Davis & Co., of Cincinnati, wants a good leg partner. See advertisement.

ANNIE LEWIS, soubrette, who can be addressed care of this office, is prepared to accept engagements after May 20th.

FRANCONI, magician, with his anatomical figures, commences an engagement at Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., on May 20th.

AT FREDERICK'S OPERA HOUSE, Toledo, Ohio, business owing to competition and changes in vocalists, has been rather on the retrograde the past week. Tommy Winnette put in an appearance on April 26th, and speedily ingratiated himself into favor. The present company consists of J. W. Rogers, Tommy Winnette, Frank Wood, Annie Gibbons, Kitty Rowell and Laura De Lano.

AT THEATRE COMIQUE, Peoria, Ill., two new people made their appearance on the 11th inst., Miss Brown, vocalist, and Eph Piper, song and dance and comique. Both were well received.

Tommy Winnette, comic vocalist, alleging close of his present engagement at Hinie's Garden, New York, returns to Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia.

AT WILD'S OPERA HOUSE, Syracuse, N. Y., the Hyam Sisters, with their pleasing songs and dances; the Claire Sisters (Minnie, Emma and Maggie), in their grand acts of contortion; the Misses Jennie Hogan and Josie Parras, in their dancers; Miss Carrie Granville, in her "Musical Monsense;" Barry Carter, with his "Emerald Gems;" R. V. Ferguson, in his inimitable character sketches, and the local favorites, Messrs. Foley and Wade, in singing and dancing, and the comicalities of Lew Hallett and Ned Goss, have been the attractions of the past week.

CINCINNATI VARIETY NEWS, up to the 4th inst., is given as follows by our correspondent:—"The Race Street Varieties have been doing splendid business this week owing, probably, to the Liberal Convention. Minnie Baker, a clever vocalist and song and dance lady, opened here on Monday night and has pleased. Lucy Adams, 'Chicago' vocalist, is engaged to open on May 20th..... The Pacific Garden has been doing an excellent business this week, and a large number of changes have occurred in the company. Jim Hayes and Lizzie Johnson closed the latter part of last week. Nash Parker, Dan Sheridan, jig and song and dance, opened last week, and closed on Tuesday. John Rivers and his performing dog, and Master Frank Rivers, opened on Monday night, as did also Clark and Sutherland, double Dutch performers, and Jerry Cavana, song and dance. On Wednesday Mons. Vantini, M'lle Salsita, Eddie Trainor and Andy Morris were added to the company. Another strong addition on the same evening was William Davenport, contortionist. Master Willie closed on Thursday. Catlett and Spence, and Carrie Austin, vocalist, still remain.....At the Olympic, Jerry Cavana closed last week, to go to the Pacific, and Kate Hunter was temporarily furloughed to go to Buffalo. Jim Hayes, Dutch, Irish and Ethiopian comedian; Lizzie Jackson, a noted vocalist of old, and Georgie Willett, vocalist, were the new additions this week. Its fair..... A fight occurred at the Vine Street Varieties last Saturday night, and the police gobbled the proprietor and several performers. The latter were released, but as several similar affrays had occurred of late at the same hall, its owner was only released on condition that the place be closed. It has accordingly been closed ever since."

THE FRONT STREET THEATRE COMIQUE, Baltimore, has been drawing fair houses the past week. The new arrivals on April 30th were Miss Maggie Gray, song and dance lady and banjo performer; Billy Noonan and Miss Alice Bateman, in Irish specialties and double clog dances, and Gilfoil and Rourke, Ethiopian performers. A prominent feature of the programme was a new edition of Mrs. Jarley's Wax Figgers, Geo. R. Edeson personating Mrs. Jarley. Gilfoil and Rourke closed Saturday. Senor Lozado, Emily Rigi, Elias Scott and the Barlow Brothers are underlined..... There were no new appearances at the Opera House the past week. Business has been tolerable. Adele Farran closed on the 6th. Messrs. Wayne and Lovely are announced to open on the 6th.

AT THE METROPOLITAN HALL, in Washington, D. C., we are informed by our correspondent, "Emma Gertrude and Josephine Walby, dancesses; Zoe de Forest, vocalist, and Bowman and Harris, song and dance and end men, joined

BUFFALO CITY
BILL POSTING
COMPANY,
GENERAL
ADVERTISING OFFICE

OFFICERS.

JAMES S. SMITH.....President.
COL. LUM SMITH.....Superintendent.
WM. FOOT, JR.....Secretary and Treasurer.
WM. KENYON.....Foreman.

BILL POSTING DEPARTMENT

Is under the immediate supervision and active attention of COL. LUM SMITH, the veteran, and the popular and trusty foreman, WM. KENYON. Knowing well the wants of advertising agents, and possessing the ability and determination to supply them expeditiously and completely, we feel confident that our "NEW DEPARTURE" will be hailed with pleasure by our old friends and patrons, to whom we guarantee entire satisfaction in the execution of all work that may be entrusted to our care.

OUR FACILITIES

Are such as will enable us to post from 5,000 to 10,000 sheets at short notice, and in the most prominent places in the city, in the most artistic manner and with the greatest dispatch. We employ no boys, but only sober and reliable men, and who are devoted to the interest of our patrons.

OUR OFFICE

Is located at No. 217 Washington street, in close proximity to all the printing houses, and convenient to the business centre of the [illegible] fitted up with the greatest taste and propriety that a long experience and knowledge of the wants of agents can dictate, and is, without doubt, the largest, most commodious and complete office devoted to the purpose in the world.

A SPECIAL ROOM

For the use of agents has been furnished in an elegant manner, where all the conveniences for writing can be found in abundance, and where all information connected with the business will be freely extended by MR. WM. FOOT, JR., who will be in attendance at all times. Each and every particular connected with advertising traveling entertainments can be transacted in this office. Lowest prices of Halls, License, Baggage, Contracts, Hotel Contracts and Newspaper Advertisements taken at the lowest rates.

We have also prepared a large illustrated diagram for the city, showing the location of all our bill boards, fences, &c., describing their capacity for holding paper, and their proximity to business centres and thoroughfares. The agent will thus be enabled to make his own selection of boards, without being obliged to leave the office.

IMPRESS THIS ON YOUR MIND,

THAT THE BUFFALO CITY BILL POSTING COMPANY
IS ESTABLISHED IN, AND DEVOTED TO INTERESTS OF THE ADVERTISING PUBLIC.

NO MORE MONOPOLIES! NO MORE EXTORTIONS!!

A Fair Remuneration for its Equivalent in Labor!

OUR TERMS. 4 cents a sheet. No charge for Bill Boards. No dictation as to amount of bill. Pay only for what you receive. Square dealing is our motto. "Semper Paratus" our trade mark.
Address all communications to
WM. FOOT, Jr., Treasurer and Secretary,

THE BUFFALO CITY DRAMATIC AGENCY.

The directors of this company, seeing with pride and pleasure the rapid growth of, and increasing demand for amusements in this city, and recognising in Buffalo "The Great Central point for variety talent between the Eastern and Western Circuits," have determined to open an agency whereby a direct communication can exist between Managers and Artists. With an earnest desire to benefit all, and a determination to do business only on the square dealing principle, we earnestly and respectfully request the co-operation of managers and performers throughout the country. When it is known that there are no less than 300 persons employed at present in the variety line alone in this city, with the changes and vacancies constantly occurring, and the brilliant prospect of Buffalo doubling its population during the next few years, the necessity of such an agency in this city will be apparent to all interested in the welfare of the profession.

Every attention to applications for engagements in this city.

Our office is especially adapted to private conference between Artists and Managers, and, with our services, are open to the accommodation of all. AMATEURS PROVIDED WITH ENGAGEMENTS AT ONCE. MANAGERS wishing any reliable information in regard to performers in this city, may apply with the certainty of receiving full and explicit replies. All communications by mail considered confidential.

PARTICULAR NOTICE.—Especial negotiations made for our customers to all parts of the country.

Wanted immediately, Artists in every branch of the variety business to good engagements, and sure pay will be guaranteed.

Address all letters to
